BOSTON ROARS WELCOME TO GOV. SMITH

Ending a triumphal tour from Albany Gov. Alfred E. Smith arrived in Boston today amidst a deafening din of welcome. The special train bearing him from the New York capital pulled into the South station about 4 o'clock, and Gov. Smith, smiling broadly and waving one of his many brown derbies, proceeded immediately to an automobile drawn up at the Summer st. entrance of the terminal.

A parade through the downtown streets began as soon as the Empire State's ruler was seated in his machine, and he was greeted by thousands along the route that led to the Parkman Bandstand on Boston Common.

Although many other thousands had roared their homage on the long rail-trek from Albany, the thousands greeting him in the Hub surpassed in enthusiasm and volume of sound the combined greetings at Pittsfield, Springfield and Worcester—the other centers through which the "Brown Derby Special" passed.

Parade to Boston Common

Leaving the train with him, among others in his party, were Mrs. Smith and the eldest Smith daughter, Mrs. John A. Warner, the mother carrying several of the twenty floral tributes presented to her en route.

With nearly half of Boston's police force deployed on the way, the Smith automobile parade left the South Station, proceeding through Summer st. to Washington st., to Milk st. and Postoffice sq., through Federal and Devonshire sts., to Dock sq. and Washington st., and then back south through

Dread Word, "Socialism" Women Campaigning Only $5000 for the Lord Grant's Great Grandson

—By Arthur Brisbane

Copyright, 1928, by Hearst Co.

MR. HOOVER told 12,000 people in Madison Square Garden, and millions on the radio that Governor Smith's program amounts to "state socialism."

That's a terrible word, "SOCIALISM," and shocked when they hear it will be Raskob, Du Pont, Woodin, Harkness, and the other "Brown Derby Boys" who left the Republican party to work for Smith.

To the Wall Street mind, "Socialism" means taking away your property, taking your income, putting your children in a sort of state factory where they are all brought up together. But perhaps Raskob, Woodin, et al, have inside information to reassure them.

Governor Smith has ruled in New York, and really RULED it, for many years, with no display of socialism beyond some interference when New York legislators elected on the Socialist ticket were to be kicked out, although legally elected.

Women play an important part in this election.

Helen Wills is for Hoover. Rosamond Pinchot, a champion in her line, is for Smith.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, home from Europe, says Smith will surely be elected.

"Baby Peggy" of the screen, on the other hand, has left the Democratic party and is for Hoover.

Mrs. E. S. Dodge dies, leaving $1,000,000. Nineteen thousand dollars go to friends; $5000 to a Presbyterian church, the balance to relatives. Five thousand dollars out of $1,000,000 given to the Lord seems small. In old days, when Heaven and Hell were taken literally, it would have been thought wise to give $900,000 of the $1,000,000 to religion and make sure of salvation.

But in this agnostic day many feel that the Lord does not need money, especially as He could create any amount of it by an easy miracle, whereas relatives and educational institutions DO need money, and can't perform miracles.

That a son is born to Princess Michael Cantacusene in Chicago means little to the average, but a great deal to a few old men of the Grand Army, who know that Princess Cantacusene is General Grant's granddaughter.

The only immortality of which we are certain, apart from the certainty of religious faith, is the immortality of our descendants. Each may live for thousands of years in his descendants. You that read this are descended from men that were alive on earth 500,000 years ago.

What our descendants will be we cannot guess.

Gen. Grant, before opportunity came and people wondered why he didn't keep "sober," little thought that he would be the great-grandfather of a son of a Russian prince.

Descendants of Astors, Vanderbilts and Rockefellers will beg their bread a thousand years hence if begging still prevails.

NASHUA 'BABY THUG,' 13, CONFESSES KILLING PAL BECAUSE HE 'SQUEALED'

Nashua, N. H., Oct. 24—Frank Rokas, child gangster, today confessed that he shot and killed Adam Goodvitch, an accomplice in a robbery, for "snitching," police said.

The body of Goodvitch, a bullet through his heart, was found in the rear of the Main St. M. E. Church near the Salvation Army driveway, with two new revolvers nearby.

The amazing feature of the shooting is the fact that the leading figures are small boys, only 13 years of age.

In the most astounding revelation of crime in New England history, Rokas admitted, police say, that he shot Goodvitch for giving information concerning a robbery for which the two boys and John Misking, 14, were held for questioning. A charge of murder will be placed against

AMERICAN'S POLITICAL FORUM

Hoover Lauded as Safe, Sane, Sound

By John Richardson

Manager Hoover Pre-Convention Campaign in Massachusetts

AS I listened to the superb speech of Herbert Hoover in Madison Square Garden, Monday night, and later carefully read that address, the thought came to me that there is presented in this campaign one of the most interesting tests of the intelligence of the American people which any presidential campaign has made possible. General Cole, in the Forum which the editor of the Boston Evening American has generously opened to both of us, pays a fine tribute to the character and accomplishments of the Democratic candidate. I agree with practically all he says in that line.

Democratic Candidate for Governor of Massachusetts

"EVERY reference to Governor Smith was greeted with cheers." I take the above words from a Lenox dispatch printed in yesterday's Springfield Republican, and I use it for my text because I want the liberal and progressive element among the voters of Greater Boston to have the TRUTH about campaign conditions in western Massachusetts. With Senator Walsh, Mr. Malley, former Lieut.-Gov. Barry, Judge Santosuosso, Joseph B. Ely, Leo M. Harlow and other speakers, I made a tour of Berkshire County on Monday and I am back home for tonight's big meetings to testify

BULLET HITS HARVARD MAN MAKING LEFT TURN

William W. Howells, 20, of Park ave., New York, a Harvard student, today complained to the Cambridge police that a bullet which passed through his hat after breaking the windshield of his car, was fired from the gun of a Cambridge traffic officer.

The student said he made a left turn from Harvard bridge into Memorial drive when the bullet struck and passed through his hat.

Patrolman A. Bassett, in his report, admitted he fired the shot but declared he was aiming for another machine, which, the Malden police had reported stolen.

The patrolman reported he fired two shots into the air when the automobile he attempted to halt sped away. He did not know at the time that the shot struck Howells' car, he said.

LADS OF 10, 14 TO FACE CHARGES

Rokas on Friday, Chief of Police Irving E. Goodwin said.

Hours after the boy was murdered, Rokas and Misking appeared at the Industrial School at Manchester and gave themselves up, claiming the police had told them they would be sent to the school for robbery.

Within a few feet of the slain boy and his revolver, by another revolver, evidently thrown there in panic after the murder by one of the gang members.

The homes of the three boys are all on the same block in Factory st. They have been suspected of many petty crimes by the police, and on Monday morning, following a robbery at Hill's hardware store, the boys were rounded up and taken to police headquarters. The hole in a window through which thieves gained entrance to the hardware store was so small the police knew the robbery was the work of boys.

The boys stoutly declared their innocence and the police were stumped. Finally the Goodvitch boy made a complete confession. He said that he and his two companions had not only committed the hardware store robbery but had stolen six revolvers from automobiles and had stolen 18 bicycles from Nashua streets within the past few weeks. He told where a portion of the loot was cached on Water st. The Rokas and Misking boys were white with anger at their companion for "squealing."

The police found some of the loot at the place designated. They turned the boys loose with the understanding that yesterday they were to turn in the stolen weapons and then go into juvenile court.

The boys did not appear at school yesterday. The police made inquiries at their homes and found that their parents knew nothing of their whereabouts. Later the Rokas and Misking boys appeared at the Manchester Industrial school and asked to be taken into custody. The school authorities talked with the Nashua police and took the boys in charge. They told the authorities their companion, Goodvitch, had gone off in another direction.

About noon Patrolman Robert Meunier saw a man in the alley back of the Methodist church. The man walked away and the officer went to the rear of the church and flashed his light down the alleyway. He saw the huddled form of the murdered boy with the weapon near the outstretched hand.

The medical examiner was immediately called. He said the boy had been dead 14 or 16 hours, which indicated that the boy was shot down by one of his companions as they met before school time.

As Nashua police reconstructed the crime, the Rokas and Misking boys, angry at their companion for turning informer, decided to do away with him. They met in the alleyway by the church, apparently one of their places of rendezvous. The Goodvitch boy apparently suspected something and apparently had procured a revolver to defend himself when he was shot down.

THRONGS FLOCK TO HUB TO GIVE SMITH GREATEST OF WELCOMES

EVERY BOSTON POLICEMAN ON DUTY FOR HIS VISIT

Tremont and Boylston sts., and to Boston Common, where Gov. Smith was presented to the thousands who had been assembled on the Common for more than two hours before his scheduled time of arrival.

Every seat in the circle surrounding the bandstand was filled as early as 2 p. m. and the lawns of the Common stretching beyond were black with people.

According to police, the throngs exceeded in size even those that turned out to see and acclaim Lindbergh.

Although earlier no arrangements had been declared made by city officials to greet Gov. Smith in his capacity as governor of an adjoining state, President Thomas Green of the City Council, acting today as mayor, stepped into the breach and recruited City Messenger Edward J. Leary to do the honors with him.

Greeted by Acting Mayor

When President Green learned that he was acting mayor, he summoned the city messenger and the two of them bustled to the places where they keep their formal frock coats and glossy hats.

Boston was represented officially when Gov. Smith arrived.

Earlier in the day there was considerable flurry both at the State House and at City Hall when enterprising reporters discovered that the Parkman Bandstand, decorated with flags and bunting for the Hoover reception a week ago, carried no decorations at all for the Smith greeting.

Park Commissioner William P. Long saved the day in this regard when he said he would have the decorations placed on the bandstand in recognition of Gov. Smith's official standing as chief executive of the Empire State.

The eastward invasion by Gov. Smith was a triumph from the time he left Albany at 10:17 a. m. until he hit Boston just before 4 p. m.

More than 20,000 greeted Smith in Springfield and 30,000 cheered him in Worcester.

At almost every station along the route of the Boston & Albany Railroad line, throngs had gathered, and to give these crowds an opportunity to see Gov. Smith and at the same time minimize the danger of injury to those in the forward lines, the engineer of the "Brown Derby Special" slowed his train.

His welcome began as soon as he invaded the Republican terrain of the Berkshire Hills.

Although the train was not scheduled to stop before reaching Springfield at 1 p. m., stations along the route were thronged with men and women as the Smith special, at reduced speed, passed through.

The governor's first welcoming and cheering crowd was sighted as the Smith special neared the platform at Chatham, N. Y.

Filene's Automatic Bargain BASEMENT

Wooden shoes vs wedding gowns

It's a far cry from wooden shoes to wedding gowns (unless perhaps one lives in Holland) but here in Filene's Basement it is running the gamut of bargain lots that make this such an interesting store.

Recently at one of our Foreign Bargain Fairs where you find such rare offerings as leather novelties, pottery, India druggets, etc., etc.—we sold 19 pairs of wooden shoes. "What novel doorstops these wooden shoes will make when painted in gay colors," remarked one customer! We thought so, too!

One of this season's future brides bought her wedding gown in Filene's Basement for $19.75—white satin—longer in the back—regularly priced $59.50 in a New York specialty shop. It was so beautiful she had several chances to sell it over again right here on the floor!

Miss —— bought a cameo ring in Filene's Basement for 69c—imagine her surprise when a jeweler (to whom she took the ring to be made smaller) offered her $6 for it! Did she sell! Oh, no—the tempting offer only made her more than ever satisfied with her Filene Basement bargain!

15 men came in from one of Boston's exclusive College Clubs to buy women's shoes; they were preparing for their annual play. Don't you think they must have made a hit in their $1.95 shoes?

—so on and on. Variety is the spice of our bargain lots—whether you buy a coat, an evening gown or a piece of antique silver when you find it on sale in Filene's Basement it's sure to be a bargain in accordance with our famous automatic plan.

To Sing for Al

ARENA SOLOIST

Mme. Rose Zulalian, well-known contralto, who will sing the "Star Spangled Banner" at the Governor Smith meeting in the Arena tonight.

To give the throng an opportunity of seeing Smith, the engineer slowed down and Governor Smith, apprised of the waiting throng, hastened to the rear platform and waved and smiled as the special crept through.

Then the train picked up speed again, but the slowing down process had to be repeated at station after station.

When the Governor came on the platform at Chatham he was hatless, but on the succeeding slowings he wore one of his many brown derbies and waved that instead of his hand.

The derby he use today was one of a fresh supply obtained as a result of the losses during the second and last Western trip.

"I had to lay these bowlers in for the battle of the Atlantic seaboard," said Smith as the train clacked its way toward Boston.

At Pittsfield, first large city entered in Massachusetts, the crowd at the station was so great that the engineer halted his train in the yards to make sure there would be no overflow on the tracks.

After he started again, he pulled the Smith special through the station at what was little more than a crawl.

The Democratic candidate waved his derby lustily as the train went by and the answering din was deafening.

Thousands were at the stations in Springfield and Worcester when the Governor arrived.

As he departed both places cheers were still resounding.

Governor Smith and his party left Albany at 10:17 a. m. The Democratic candidate drove in an automobile to the Boston & Albany R. R. station with his wife and eldest daughter.

The Governor wore the same heavy gray ulster and woolen scarf that he used to ward off the chill on both western swings.

There was a crowd at the station to see him off, but although he acknowledged the greeting of the throng, he said nothing before boarding the "St. Nicholas," private car of William F. Kenny, wealthy New York city contractor and boyhood "pal" of the Governor.

In the party, in addition to Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Warner, were Mr. Kenny and John Curtin, New York attorney, personal friends of the candidate; Maj. John A. Warner, the Governor's son-in-law and superintendent of state police; Andrew J. Warner, a brother of Maj. Warner; John J. Glynn, Jr., the Governor's nephew; Joseph L. Cohn, personal publicity representative of the Governor, and Mrs. June Hamilton Rhodes, in charge of women's publicity.

It is expected that by the time the meetings at the Boston Arena, Mechanics Building and Symphony Hall are ended, the Democratic candidate will have been seen by at least 200,000 persons in the Hub.

Mrs. Smith and the eldest Smith daughter, Mrs. John A. Warner, wife of The New York state police head, were with the Governor when he started for Boston at 10 o'clock for the last campaign on the Atlantic seaboard.

The younger daughter, Mrs. Francis J. Quinlan, remained at her home in New York City.

Mrs. Warner, who was with her father on his two trips into the West, decided to make the Boston trip at the last moment. She was tired out when she returned from the last Smith swing, but said today she had spent two days resting and was enthusiastic to see Boston.

The Smith departure from Albany was made with the candidate expressing smiling confidence that he will win the east, or such a vital part of it that includes Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania—and Maryland.

Under normal conditions, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut and Pennsylvania are Republican, and New York is Republican except in the matter of Al Smith, who in only one campaign has failed to win what he sought in politics.

Four years ago the 18 electoral votes of Massachusetts, the 43 in New York, the 23 in New Jersey and the eight in Maryland all went for Coolidge, but the Smith supporters don't see that this year they will all go for Smith.

CROWDS OF VISITORS

Every train that arrived in the South and North stations today brought throngs from outlying sections, who came here eager to obtain a glimpse, if nothing else, of the Democratic standard bearer. All were ready to raise their voices in acclaim. Long before noon streets in the downtown section were thronged with the visitors and early in the day the handling of traffic became a problem.

At the South station the party was greeted by Democratic State Chairman Frank J. Donahue, who will act as personal escort to Governor Smith during his stay in Boston.

The party entered waiting automobiles and a tour of the downtown section immediately started.

The Boston Band was at the South Station long before his arrival, and there were Smith songs aplenty to keep the crowd's enthusiasm at a high pitch. There were 25 automobiles in the line of parade, approximately 15 of which were Governor and Mrs. Smith rode in the first machine and their daughter, Mrs. Warner, and others of the Governor's party were in the second second machine.

Governor Smith was due at the Parkman Bandstand between 4:45 and 5 o'clock. The crowds here were the greatest in the Common's history, as office and store workers of most of the city had finished work and thousands expected to remain in town to get a glimpse of the candidate, if not hear him.

SECOND PARADE

At the bandstand, Governor Smith acknowledged the greetings of the multitude.

After his appearance on the Common, the same automobile party again formed and proceeded out to Charles st., to Beacon st., past the home of Governor Fuller at 150 Beacon st., where the Governor early made a stop on his Boston visit last week, and thence through Dartmouth st., Copley sq. and St. James ave., to the Statler.

It is planned that Governor Smith will leave his hotel at 7:45 o'clock, or a few moments later, in order to reach the first overflow meeting at Mechanics Building about 8 o'clock. He will ride to the building by way of St. James ave. and Huntington ave. Sergt. Ormingon Waugh of the Back Bay station will be in charge of a detail of 120 patrolmen and eight sergeants.

While the principal address of Governor Smith will be delivered at the Arena, tonight at 8 o'clock, overflow meetings will be held in Symphony Hall and the Mechanics Building. There will be no reserved seats—the doors will open at 6 o'clock and the seats go to those

Members of Smith Party on 'Brown Derby' Special

In Governor Smith's party when the departure from Albany for Boston came today were Mrs. Smith, Maj. and Mrs. John A. Warner, the Governor's son-in-law and daughter; John Curtin, New York attorney; Andrew J. Warner, John J. Glynn, the Governor's nephew, and the usual group of stenographers, typists, telegraph operators and newspapermen.

The 11-car special train used in the Western tours over more than 10,000 miles of track, was broken up and in its place substituted a five-car train equipped only for day travel.

who are first on the list.

Symphony Hall will be reserved as far as possible for women, particularly for Republican women who have been invited to attend. Governor Smith will address these overflow meetings on his way to the Arena.

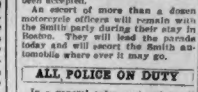
AT THE ARENA

At the Arena, Mrs. Francis B Sayre, of Cambridge, daughter of the late President Woodrow Wilson, will preside after the meeting has been formally opened by State Chairman Donahue.

It is indicated that Governor Smith, stung to the quick by Herbert Hoover's New York speech and his charges of Socialistic tendencies on the part of the Democratic nominee, will lash out in reply.

The speech will be broadcast over a nation-wide radio hook-up.

The only official cognizance that



Governor Fuller and the State House has taken of the coming of Governor Smith has been an offer to put State police at the disposal of the Democratic leaders in the handling of the crowds and the protection of the Smith party.

Superintendent of Police Michael H. Crowley believes his force is sufficient to cope with the situation and the governor's offer has not been accepted.

An escort of more than a dozen motorcycle officers will remain with the Smith party during their stay in Boston. They will lead the parade today and will escort the Smith automobile where ever it may go.

ALL POLICE ON DUTY

In a general order sent out to all divisions last night by Superintendent Crowley, it was mentioned that "the arrival and departure of Governor Smith will cause members of the department many extra hours' work and it will be a long detail. The detail will consist of day men and night men, because of necessity, and the commissioner is very desirous that the members of the force give a good account of themselves on this detail.

All officers on the detail are to be patient and cool, and pay strict attention to business and the crowds, and at all times to use common sense and good judgment in directing strangers and others to the locations desired and requested by them. All officers will present their best possible appearance, be courteous and polite at all times and prevent crowding and pushing as much as possible."

Capt. Anderson of Station 14 has been instructed to arrange for an adequate detail to handle both vehicular and pedestrian traffic in streets near the Arena and Symphony Hall and Mechanics building, where overflow meetings will take place.

An officer in plain clothes from the Bureau of Criminal Investigation is to ride in Governor Smith's car.

of domestic relations by Miss Helen Morrissey, 23.

The charges involve paternity. Miss Morrissey said she was the mother of a seven and one-half-months-old baby.

Miss Morrissey charged that Grange had failed to pay any hospital bills for her and refused to support her child or make any provision for her.

Miss Morrissey told Judge Fetter she merely wished the $1100 provided by the laws of Illinois in such cases.

A policeman served the warrant upon Grange at a loop theater and hearing on the case was set for 9 o'clock tomorrow morning.

SMITH FACES SEA OF BROWN DERBIES ON SIDEWALKS OF HUB

YOUTHS GIVE UP HOLIDAYS TO GREET 'HAPPY WARRIOR'

THE Smith special train, on arriving here today, came to a halt on track 15. This point was selected by Stationmaster M. A. Kehoe because it is directly opposite the Summer st. exit. There the Democratic nominee entered his automobile for the uptown parade. A roped passageway for the Governor and his party extended from the track gates across the station concourse to the exit and a cordon of police lined the ropes at the time of his arrival to prevent the crowds from breaking through.

Brown derbies were as scarce as hen's teeth today in downtown stores. Smith boosters cornered the market more than a week ago in anticipation of today's visit and the Smith brown derby frolic on Monday evening further depleted the retail supply. One Washington st. store had only five left early today out of a consignment of 400.

Parking places throughout the city were noticeably lacking their usual quota of automobiles. Traffic officers attributed their absence to the fear of suburban drivers of the traffic jam which will follow the Smith parade.

The Smith address tonight probably will be grouped under three main heads—prohibition, labor and Socialism. The last heading comes as a result of Hoover's pinning a "State Socialist" tag on Smith at Hoover's talk in Madison Sq. Garden. "There are many leading Republicans in the same boat," declared Smith today before starting for Boston. "I have an answer ready for that one."

A group of youths who mistook the Cole headquarters on Boylston st. for that of Smith informed attendants there that they had sacrificed their days off in the past few weeks in order to take a two days' holiday to greet the New York Governor.

Mary Burns, telephone operator at the Democratic State headquarters in the Statler, sacrificed her lunch hour today to man the trunk lines carrying out-of-town inquiries concerning the Smith visit to Boston.

Daniel F. O'Connell, executive secretary of the Democratic State Committee, announced that his office was swamped with requests from all parts of New England and from New York for reservations for the Arena speech tonight. He predicted it would be the "most glorious political night in the history of Boston."

At an early hour the Statler lobby was thronged with Smith members intent on holding a vantage point for a view of their political idol. Brown derbies were in evidence everywhere on heads of all ages, and a spirit of bustle pervaded the entire hotel and its environs.

The favorable weather of the morning brought hundreds of young women into the downtown district and scores wore Smith labels on their hats and coats.

Miss Helen Whalen of Natick, who has been one of the active workers in behalf of the Smith campaign, was one of the early arrivals in Boston. She was given a cordial welcome at Democratic headquarters in the Statler. With her she brought her brown derby.

Representative "Tony" Garofano and his wife drove in from Lynn early and secured good positions along the line of march. "Tony" was one of the organizers of the Smith Club, Lynn.

Miss Catherine Smith of Brockton, who has been speaking for the State ticket along the South Shore, arrived in town about noon with a party of Brockton friends.

Scores tried to crash the gates at Smith publicity headquarters in the Statler as genuine newspaper scribes and cameramen, in the hope of obtaining one of the coveted press badges, open sesames to all Smith functions in the city.

The front of the Hotel Statler, where Governor Smith is to remain while he is in Boston, blazed forth today with a huge red and white banner with the inscription "Welcome."

Al Tracey of Stoneham, connected with the South Station information service, was a busy man answering questions at the station as to just what track Governor Smith's special train would arrive on and how near spectators could venture in order to get a glimpse at the "Happy Warrior."

Almost a score of rabid Smith rooters were discovered in the dark and cavernous depths of the Arena auditorium early today by George Brown, its manager, but their ingenuity in gaining admittance unseen, and their obvious determination to be on hand for the Governor's speech, softened Brown's heart sufficiently to allow them to remain.

Women are nothing if not expedient. Brown received a telephone request from a prominent women's club in Boston today to reserve a block of seats for its membership at the Arena, with the added plea that they be permitted to occupy them soon after eleven.

A few minutes after he had diplomatically disposed of that communication, the Arena manager received a call from two clergymen in Concord, N. H., asking for reservations.

An aged woman from an outlying town spent an anxious hour on the Common early today asking everyone she met just where "Al Smith will stand to speak."

"I'm hard of hearing," she explained, "and I want to get close so I can shake his hand, too."

"Smith makes good business for us today," grinned taxi drivers. "The town's nearly empty of private cars."

The entire east wing of the 10th floor in the Hotel Statler, comprising 30 rooms, was reserved for Governor and Mrs. Smith, their family and accompanying entourage. All approaches to the suite was guarded by a detail of spic and span police and all persons were barred from entrance except employes chosen to look after the wants of the visitors.

Huge bouquets of American Beauty roses and chrysanthemums decorate the boudoirs of the ladies in the party, the gift of the hotel.

Smith rooters who believe in signs saw a favorable omen on an automobile parked outside the South Station whose occupants were awaiting the arrival of the "Happy Warrior." The license plate bore the Massachusetts registration number "1" and over these the name of Smith. "First in the election" was the interpretation of the crowd which saw them.

Among the first to arrive at the station and obtain permission to enter through the gates of Track 15 were Dist. Atty. William J. Foley and his secretary, Thomas McDevitt.

Miss Irene McAuliffe, Boston policewoman, has been detailed as the bodyguard of Mrs. Smith and the female members of her visiting family during their Boston visit.

Lee Yong, secretary of the Chinese Merchants Association of New York, was in line at the station with his brown derby to greet Smith when he passed through the crowd.

Police Inspectors Stephen Flaherty, "Pat" Donovan and Thomas Murray make up the personal bodyguard of Governor Smith and his party and will be on guard day and night at the Statler during his stay in Boston.

Mrs. Mary Bartlett and her two-year-old daughter, Edna, of Provincetown, arrived at the South Station early in the day to take up a strategic position for a view of the Democratic nominee.

Acting Mayor Green, in a communication to Smith headquarters at the Statler, denied that the absence of decorations on the Parkman bandstand was an intended slight to Governor Smith. Green asserted he had given orders for the embellishment of the stand last night and promised the job would be completed before the New York governor stepped to the dais for his Common speech.

Incidentally, the acting mayor disclosed that the decorations under which Herbert Hoover stood to speak in his recent Boston visit were left over from Columbus Day.

Another royal rooter for "Al" was Al Robinson, Texas Ranger, who is spending the Winter in New Hampshire for his health. Robinson, wearing a brown derby, was intent on renewing his acquaintance with the Governor after a lapse of many years.

Austin, Tex., Oct. 24 (AP)—Death last night claimed the Rt. Rev. George Herbert Kinsolving, 79, for more than 33 years bishop of the Texas diocese of the Episcopal church.

Expect 20 Million to Hear Smith on Radio Tonight

Estimates of the number of persons who will hear Gov. Smith's Boston address tonight run all the way from 10,000,000 to 15,000,000.

The speech will be broadcast over a nation-wide hookup, with the local stations WBZ and WBZA carrying the National Broadcasting Co. output.

His actual audience cannot go over capacity for the three halls—12,000 in the Boston Arena, where the main address will be made, and 20,000 in Symphony Hall and Mechanics Building, where he will appear briefly before going to the Arena.

THOUSANDS AT SPRINGFIELD CHEER SMITH

Springfield, Oct. 24—Making his first appearance here as a candidate for President, Gov. Alfred E. Smith was accorded a royal reception by more than 20,000 persons today when his special train, bearing him toward his important Boston speaking engagement, made a 10-minute stop.

He made no address to the assembled throng because his physician forbade it, in view of the long speech he is to make at the Boston Arena this evening.

Mrs. Smith accompanied her husband from the train to a temporary platform near the Charles st. railroad siding. She met a tremendous hit with the crowd and was the recipient of 20 beautiful floral tributes.

Apparently the warmth of the reception impressed her greatly, for after the departure was made she was still waving farewells from the rear platform as the train passed into the distance.

The arrival here was at 12:50 and Governor and Mrs. Smith went immediately to the platform around which the crowd was gathered on Charles st. and in an open lot adjoining.

The Republican mayor, Frank C. Parker, extended the city's official welcome, saying: "I am glad to pay my respects to a man who is commanding the attention of all the world, and this also applies to Mrs. Smith."

Governor Smith was presented to the gathering by Gen. Charles H. Cole, candidate for Governor. Smith, who was wearing a long ulster, had his hat off and was waving the famous brown derby to the crowd, and Mrs. Smith was smiling.

The assembled thousands were roaring their greeting and had to be stilled by energetic signalling from the platform, so that the short time allotted for the stop here would not be thus consumed.

Senator David I. Walsh explained that Governor Smith would be unable to deliver a speech, due to his physician's orders.

CHEERS FOR MRS. SMITH.

Mrs. Smith then came in for her share of the reception when the bouquets were presented amid renewed cheering. Volunteers carried them to the train for her.

As three bands played "The Sidewalks of New York," the Democratic candidate mounted the steps to the rear platform of the train. He shook hands with several policemen and a large number of railroad employes who crowded around him in their grimy working clothes and he signed the autograph album of 12-year-old Christina Wolfe of Niagara st.

Not the least impressed, apparently, was Mayor Parker who told newspapermen, "This certainly is a great party. I want to say that I found Mrs. Smith a most gracious lady, with a wonderful personality."

Former Lieut.-Gov. Edward P. Barry, candidate for attorney-general, and Joseph Santosuosso, who is running for secretary of state, joined the Smith party here.

Al Smith Leads in First Returns!

New York, Oct. 24 (INS)—The first vote in the presidential election of 1928 was cast today—for Governor Smith—according to Democratic national campaign headquarters here. It came from California, Herbert Hoover's home State.

George H. Pinard, a resident of Cleveland, O., who is temporarily in San Jose, Cal., voted under the Ohio absentee voter law.

"This is the first time I ever voted the Democratic ticket," Pinard wrote to Chairman John J. Raskob of the Democratic national committee in reporting the despatch of his ballot by airmail to Cleveland.

30,000 WILDLY CHEER SMITH IN WORCESTER

Worcester, Oct. 24—Thirty thousand shrieking enthusiasts today gave Governor Smith a reception exceeding in noise and sincerity anything ever tendered a visitor to this city.

A shouting, milling throng, many equipped with horns and other noise-making devices, packed the railroad station when the Smith special rolled in, surged through the lines of police and separated Governor Smith from his wife and the remainder of his party.

Police literally dragged the Democratic chieftain and Mrs. Smith through the howling mass of humanity to the concourse in the station, while volleys of cheers reverberated through the big structure.

As the train pulled in at 1:31 p. m., two minutes behind schedule, Gov. and Mrs. Smith were seen on the rear platform. "The Happy Warrior" waving the famous brown derby, his face wreathed in the equally famous smile. With him were Senator David I. Walsh, Frank J. Donahue, chairman of the Democratic state committee, and the governor's personal party.

A reception committee headed by Dr. Thomas J. Barrett, president of the Smith-Robinson Club of Worcester, and Leo D. Morse, chairman of the Democratic city committee, with whom was Mayor Edward W. Quinn of Cambridge, national committeeman, was waiting at the tracks.

As the train came to a stop the crowd shoved forward and greeters were lost as the Governor stepped into the milling throng and for a time was wallowed up.

He attempted to fight his way through the crowd, but without the assistance of police would have made little progress. With the officers' aid, however, he reached the concourse in the station and then the platform in front.

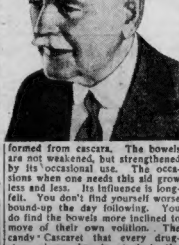
A Doctor Talks
About Cascara



It is unfortunate that many people judge the thoroughness of a laxative by its violence. The salts that rush through the system may not even penetrate the film of poisonous matter that has coated the colon. A long list of drugs will "loosen the bowels" but what is the best way to CLEANSE them?

The world's best laxative is one that Mother Nature makes in her own laboratory. It is the bark of a tree, called CASCARA. The Indians used to chew this bark—and reach old age without a sick day. It is the best thing there is today, for any system; best for the blood. The most beneficial in its action on the bowels, of anything yet disclosed. For many reasons:

First of all, there is no HABIT formed from cascara. The bowels are not weakened, but strengthened by its occasional use. The occasions when one needs this old grow less and less. Its influence is long-felt. You don't find yourself worse bound-up the day following. You do find the bowels more inclined to move of their own volition. The candy Cascarets that every drug-store always has in stock is the ideal form of cascara.

OFFER THANKS FOR PEACE, SAYS COOLIDGE

Washington, Oct. 24 (AP)—President Coolidge issued his annual Thanksgiving proclamation today by calling upon the people to offer thanks on Thursday, November 29, for prosperity in agriculture, industry and commerce, and for the peace which has existed in the last year.

The proclamation said:

"The season again approaches when it has been the custom for generations to set apart a day of thanksgiving for the blessings which the giver of all good and perfect gifts has bestowed upon us during the year.

"It is most becoming that we should do this, for the goodness and mercy of God which has followed us through the year deserve our grateful recognition and acknowledgment.

"Through his divine favor peace and tranquility have reigned throughout the land. He has protected our country as a whole against pestilence and disaster and has directed us in the way of national prosperity.

"Our fields have been abundantly productive; our industries have flourished; our commerce has increased; wages have been rewarded and contentment has followed the undisturbed pursuit of honest toil.

"As we have prospered in material things, so have we also grown and expanded in the spiritual. Through divine inspiration we have been imbued with high ideals which have operated for the benefit of the world and the promotion of the brotherhood of man through peace and good will.

"Wherefore, I hereby set apart Thursday, the 29th day of November, as a day of general thanksgiving and prayer, and I recommend that on that day the people shall cease from their daily work and in their homes and their accustomed places of worship devoutly give thanks to the Almighty for the many and great blessings they have received, and seek His guidance that they may deserve a continuance of His favor."

After sending an SOS and a message that the crew was taking to the lifeboats, Capt. T. J. Baker of the Cairntorr wirelessed agents of the line he believed the vessel could be saved. He gave no details, however, and it was not known whether the crew and the master were staying with their ship. A tug was ordered to the scene.

When a number of ill children were taken to hospitals it was thought they were suffering from ptomaine poisoning, but physicians later concluded that it was botulism which produced illness and that either ripe olives or sausage might have produced infection. It is feared others would become ill.

In Pawtucket Governor Smith will be taken to the historic Slater mill, the birthplace of the cotton industry in America, where a little girl will present him five bouquets of flowers representing this state's five electoral votes.

Later he will come to Providence where he will be greeted by Democratic officials. Although Governor Smith plans no address here, it is hoped he may be induced to say a few words.

He will leave Providence early in the afternoon for Hartford, Ct., where he will speak tomorrow night.

AGED DIGHTON MAN SET FREE AS SANE

Isaac Newton Hinds of Dighton, for some time past an inmate of the Taunton State Hospital, will celebrate his 89th birthday on Sunday at home, having been released from custody by Judge Sanderson in Supreme Court.

Hinds, who claimed he was confined as insane because of his fortune of $30,000, answered intelligently questions put to him by Judge Sanderson and his attorney, John M. Morrison.

"I am not able to bring my mind to feel that he ought to be continued at the hospital as an insane person, in spite of the testimony of the doctors," Judge Sanderson said. "My order is that he be released and sent to further order of the court."

Mrs. Annie M. Harvey, daughter of Hinds, denied she had been requested to take her father out of a Providence institution because he was pronounced sane. "Do you want him released now?" Judge Sanderson asked. The woman hesitated and replied: "Whatever seems best."

BOTH SIDES ARGUED IN BOSTON AMERICAN POLITICAL FORUM

HOOVER IS 'SAFE AND SOUND'

It is a peculiarity of this campaign that it is not, as far as the Republican management is concerned, being conducted in any spirit of personal derogation of Governor Smith, or with any belittling of his accomplishments as the chief executive of the Empire State.

"In fact, it will be no reflection upon Governor Smith if he is beaten in this campaign; he is simply up against a candidate so superior to him in every point of availability and mental power that there is no real comparison between the two men.

The Democratic candidate, having his fling with various "issues," some of which he has created himself and in direct opposition to the platform and traditions of his party, has committed himself to a series of proposals which are as remote from the basic principles upon which the American government was founded as they possibly could be.

RAPS TAMMANY

They are better placed in the platform of the Socialist party, which also has a ticket in the field.

"To a man of Governor Smith's background, it seems perfectly natural and proper that the Government should be the whole thing; that it should reward its followers with remunerative offices, should dictate the policies of the local community and should ride out to the people what it pleases; that it should take money from their own pockets to give them excursions down the harbor and should pay them for the lavish gifts which local chieftans are wont to distribute at Christmas tide.

That is the Tammany way of doing things, and Governor Smith thinks it is all right.

This program sounds good, of course, to the men who would rather make their living out of politics than in any other way. Every Democratic boss in Massachusetts is throwing up his hat for Smith in the hope that the Tammany system can be spread to cover the country.

To say that Smith as President could rule in the White House and resist the terrific pressure which would be forced upon him by his friends and former associates, is to show a lack of knowledge of practical politics.

POLICY COSTLY

The issue of Tammany covers only one phase of the present situation, although it is an important one. Mr. Hoover has made no reference to it, and I do so only to present the background for the issue of Government control of every business activity, as attempted by the Tammany leaders in New York, is unmistakably wrapped up in Governor Smith's scheme to put States into the liquor business, to continue a bureaucratic administration of the merchant marine, to own and sell water power, and to take the sale of agricultural products out of the hands of the farmers and entrust them to the Government.

These are plausible ideas, these and other radicalistic policies which are on Governor Smith's program.

QUOTES GOMPERS

Nor is this the most dangerous phase of the issue. Samuel Gompers saw what that was long before Mr. Hoover became a presidential candidate. Mr. Hoover Monday night let the dead Gompers tell the story in his own words:

"I believe," said the president of the American Federation of Labor in 1926, "there is no man to whom I would take a second position in my loyalty to the labor public, yet I would not give it more power over the individual citizenship of the country. If I were a minority of one, I would want to cast my vote so that the men of labor shall not willingly enslave themselves to Government authority in the industrial effort for freedom."

The Democratic candidate has not explained what his Socialistic program would mean to the working men and women of America, but Mr. Hoover did.

In plain language, this means that the great bureaucrat Governor Smith would set up in Washington would mean democratic party rule alone at the expense of legitimate business.

COOLIDGE SAYS AL STRONG IN STATE

that western Massachusetts' interest in our party and its candidates has never been so keen.

It should be known in Greater Boston because of the very evident attempt of the opposition to break down the spirit of Republican Democrats and Independents by suggesting to them that there is no hope because of the tremendous Republican majorities which—they say—are sure to be piled up in the towns, villages and smaller cities.

In expressive language of the eminent statesman and great commoner whose presence in Boston today fills us all with new courage, this story of what the towns are going to do to Smith and the Democratic ticket is the bunk.

"Every reference to Governor Smith was greeted with cheers."

This was declared by the Springfield Republican, was in Lenox.

How about the other towns?

RALLIES CROWDED

I am going to tell you about them, too, also in the words of reporters for the Springfield newspaper. I quote the Republican because that famous journal appears to be supporting the candidacy of Hoover."

Pittsfield, Oct. 22—A crowd of at least 1200 men and women filled the Winter Garden to capacity at a Democratic rally tonight.

North Adams, Oct. 22—A series of rallies in Adams and North Adams tonight, with a list of Democratic candidates as speakers, set a high attendance record for political meetings in Northern Berkshire. It has been many years since the voters of this district have turned out in such large numbers.

Lenox, Oct. 22—The Lenox Town Hall was all too small in seating capacity to seat the crowd that assembled at 7 o'clock tonight to attend the Democratic rally. .....Every reference to Governor Smith was greeted with cheers.

Our dear enemies, you know, have been advising us not to be deceived by the size of the crowds which are turning out to see Governor Smith.

"Remember Bryan and 1896," the Republican elder statesmen caution us. "The crowds flock to Smith,' they say and they would like to believe, "because he is something new on the national platform."

'PROPAGANDA' HIT

Well, not to spend too long a time upon the subject, all I want to do is point out that 150 miles west of Boston on Monday night the crowds turned out as they never had turned out before—on the authority of a Hoover newspaper—with absolutely no hope or expectation that they were going to see or hear the standard-bearer.

If this means anything, it means that this is a Democratic year in Massachusetts, all the way from Newburyport to the New York border.

And this is my message today to all in Greater Boston who may be classed as liberals or progressives: Pay NO attention to the propaganda, which says it does not matter that Boston is capable of giving Governor Smith a majority of more than 100,000, because whatever the size of the Boston vote, it will be wiped out by the towns.

I say again that this sort of talk is "the bunk."

He is with us today, this great American whose career may well be an inspiration to every boy in the land, and until he leaves us tomorrow, to carry the same message of hope down into Rhode Island, he will hear nothing else than cheers.

EXPERT QUOTED

It requires no prophetic gift to say that Boston will witness tonight such a demonstration of interest, love and real affection as has seldom been made in honor of a political leader.

We turn out tonight in Alfred E. Smith's honor because of what he has achieved in his own State on behalf of the Common Man—and because we look for like performances when Governor Smith has become President Smith.

If anyone wishes proof of how frantic the Republican managers are today, let me refer him to Mr. Theodore G. Joslin's dispatch from Buffalo, N. Y., to the Boston Evening Transcript, printed in yesterday's paper.

"The Republicans are bending every effort and using every argument to swing these two counties (Erie and Monroe), still further back into line. In some instances they are overplaying their hands. They have every right to employ the tariff argument and to portray the possibility of bread lines if the Democrats are returned to power nationally.

SEES VICTORY

"There is no justification, however, for letters which I know a certain Republican official in Buffalo has addressed to 400 Republican city employes informing them that unless they 'deliver' their precincts to Hoover, they will be looking for new jobs on the day after election.

When the Transcript correspondent concludes that men who resort to the despicable practices he describes are "overplaying their hands," every sane man with any experience whatever in practical politics will agree with him.

HOOVER TO SEEK GERMAN VOTE IN ST. LOUIS

Washington, Oct. 24 (INS)—Having wound up his eastern campaign for the presidency, Herbert Hoover today was preparing for his last campaign swing. He will leave Washington a week from tomorrow on a trip that will take him home to California to vote.

The Republican nominee's next and semi-final effort will be a speech in St. Louis about November 8, which will constitute his final appeal to the middle west. In that address the candidate will make a particular bid for the German vote in St. Louis in the hope of swinging Missouri, a doubtful State, into the republican column.

He also will take the opportunity to touch upon problems affecting the Mississippi Valley, a bid for support in Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa, Illinois, Tennessee, Kentucky and Arkansas.

ALLAN'S FIRST VOTE

Hoover will make this speech while en route to his Stanford University, Cal., home to vote in the November election. He will be accompanied by Mrs. Hoover and his sons, Herbert, Jr., and Allan, all of whom will vote in the election. Incidentally, it will be the "first vote" for Allan, who recently came of age.

The nominee's itinerary is still the subject of considerable deliberation. Some of his advisers have urged him to make a number of rear platform appearances in cities all over the middle west and on the mountain area. Hoover, an inexperienced campaigner, however, has demurred as he has found no enjoyment in his barnstorming political tours.

FINAL EFFORT

Under present plans, the candidate's final campaign effort will be a speech from the west coast to be widely broadcasted by radio, on the night before election. Unless this program is changed, two more speeches and a number of rear platform appearances between St. Louis and San Francisco during the first week of November will constitute the rest of his campaign.

Both Hoover and his advisers meanwhile were awaiting national reaction to his New York speech, in which he dropped his program of explaining Republican issues to assail the policies of his Democratic opponent, Governor Smith. Hoover charged the Smith programs on farm relief, prohibition and water power development would result in "State socialism" and lead to the "destruction of self-government" in America.

TRUE LIBERALISM

The effect of this speech, in which Hoover assailed some beliefs of the senatorial insurgent bloc, can only be ascertained when the insurgents have spoken. The Hoover leaders, however, believed the speech would not alienate any of the Republican insurgents already pledged to him, and that it would have no effect on those still outside the fold.

"There was enough true liberalism in his speech to satisfy any progressive in the world," said one of his advisers.

Hoover was pleased greatly with the results of his visit to New York. He came back to Washington an optimistic candidate, convinced he will carry the industrial east and that he will win the election two weeks away.

AVERS SMITH WILL GET VOTE OF NEGROES

"For the first time in the history of my race my people are going to vote for a Democratic candidate for President," Dr. William Worthey, prominent colored citizen, declared today at the noon Smith rally sponsored by Mayor James M. Curley at the Young's Hotel.

"I have taken the stump for Smith because I feel the nation faces a real crisis," he continued. "Back in August I notified the chairman of the Republican ward committee of which I was a member that I believed Senator Walsh and Smith were the only Democratic grants and I would support them, and tendered my resignation. I told him the Republicans had broken faith with the negroes. Since then I have amended my action and I will vote for the entire Democratic ticket."

Dr. Worthey said religion was the outstanding issue in the campaign, and that it was injected at least with the silent consent of the Republican party.

"Our Republican Governor Fuller never made a truer statement when he said before the American Legion boys that they never faced a more deadly enemy in France than in Heflin and Straton.

"It is a hypocrite and to my mind the Republican party is the greatest hypocrite of my knowledge The Republicans have kicked the negroes out of the party to make room for the lily whites' in the South."

Other colored speakers were Atty. James G. Wolff, Lieut. Joseph W Holmes, Dr. Walter O. Taylor, Atty. Cyril F. Butler and William Mallory.

Francis P. McLaughlin, former member of the Democratic city committee, opened the meeting, praising Governor Smith and denouncing the Republican claims of prosperity.

Former Mayor Curley, in introducing Dr. Worthey, said he was a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, and one of those whose education and place in the arts was made possible by a man, of the people, Abraham Lincoln.

G.O.P. Named Ottinger as 'Foil to Bigotry,' Asserts Untermyer

New York, Oct. 24 (AP)—Samuel Untermyer, attorney, in a letter today endorsing Franklin D. Roosevelt, Democratic candidate for Governor, charged that Albert Ottinger had been nominated for Governor by the State Republican party "solely because he is a Jew and as a foil to ever up the campaign of bigotry that the Republican party is waging throughout the nation."

Untermyer said he had been asked to support Ottinger on the ground 'that he was to be first Jew ever to be nominated for Governor in New York State.

CALL HEARING IN PROTEST ON BALLOT

The Massachusetts State Ballot Law Commission will conduct a hearing at the State House tomorrow on the protest of John J. Murphy of Somerville with reference to the makeup of the ballots to be used at the coming national election.

Murphy claims the ballots are printed in such a manner that Al Smith stands to lose between 25,000 and 50,000 votes.

He complained the square in which to vote for electors of the Workers' Party is at the immediate left of the names of Al Smith and Joe Robinson and that voters intending to vote for the Democratic candidates will be confused and place their cross in the square to the left instead of the right, with the result that Foster and Gillow, the Workers' Party candidates, would get the votes.

Murphy's protest was received today by Secretary of State Frederic W. Cook, who telephoned Chairman Henry V. Cunningham of the ballot law commission. Mr. Cunningham set the hearing.

More than 1,500,000 of the 2,000,000 ballots to be printed at next month's election have already been printed and Secretary Cook says it would be a physical impossibility to reprint them in time for the election.

BARNES WANTS SMITH REPLY ON POOL

On the occasion of Governor Smith's visit to Boston, Clarence A. Barnes, defeated candidate for attorney general in the Republican primaries, speaking at the Republican noon rally at the Adams House, stated he hoped the Democratic leader would answer Barnes' last letter to him on the Albany baseball pool.

"It was six weeks ago that Governor Smith challenged me to go to Albany and point out the headquarters of the Albany Baseball Pool, a fake lottery operated by the gang of swindlers who are over disgraced American life," he said.

"It seems almost an insult to the other criminals to try this crew in the same courts. In New York however, the Federal authorities now have Bill Pringle, alleged treasurer of the pool, on trial with a negro agent from Harlem, named Lytle.

"From the text of Governor Smith's letters to me he tries to make it appear that he knew nothing of the fake lottery. He was filled with political indignation that anybody dared to mention the Albany pool in a letter to him. He dramatically demanded that I go to Albany at once and point out the headquarters. I have been to Albany. I went before the grand jury of Albany county where was hurriedly called by the Democratic district attorney to investigate the pool. They are still investigating. They will investigate until after election day. After that it can't hurt Governor Smith's political fortunes no matter what the results of their investigation.

"Governor Smith today is a guest in Massachusetts. He has come here to ridicule and belittle the marvelous record as President of the United States made by that most distinguished citizen of our commonwealth, Calvin Coolidge. I wish Governor Smith all the satisfaction he can get out of his trip."

Man Is Stealing Pot and Pan Stuff in Barber Revenge

Washington, Oct. 24 (AP)—So long as women must usurp man's place in the barber chair, there is prospect of a degree of retaliation by the sterner sex—usurpation of the kitchen.

The Federal Bureau of Education figured today that 17000 high school boys are taking courses in home economics, to learn all about the domestic problems of their future homes.

Within two years, the bureau says, a feeling has developed among high school superintendents that boys need instruction in the fundamental principles underlying successful American home life.

NORRIS BOLTS G. O. P.

New York, Oct. 24 (INS)—Democratic national headquarters today announced that George W. Norris of Nebraska, a leader of the Republican-insurgent bloc, would speak in Omaha Saturday night in behalf of the presidential candidacy of Governor Alfred E. Smith.

A nation-wide radio hookup has been arranged by the Democratic committee for Senator Norris' address, which Chairman John J. Raskob and his advisers hope will have an important effect in the agricultural sections, in which Norris commands his greatest following.

Nominally a Republican, Norris has confined his campaign activities since the Kansas City convention to speaking tours in advocacy of senators and congressmen affiliated with the so-called "Progressive bloc." Thus far he has endorsed neither presidential candidate, although he has lauded the Democratic platform on water power development as enunciated by Smith in Denver.

WORK SPEEDS UP ON MISSISSIPPI CONTROL

Washington, Oct. 24 (AP)—The War Department announced today that work is progressing so rapidly on Mississippi river flood control, that indications are the entire appropriation of $24,000,000 available will have been expended or obligated prior to June 30, 1929.

Operations going on under the new flood control plan are in four classes. They include enlargement and strengthening of main river levees, bank revetment, dredging and preliminary work on the Bonnet Carre spillway for the protection of New Orleans.

BIG POWER MAN SAYS HE TOYED WITH TRUTH

Washington, Oct. 24 (AP)—Robert Montgomery, sales manager of the Louisville Gas & Electric Company, testified today in the Federal Trade Commission's power investigation that he had made untrue statements in a letter written February 8, 1928, concerning relations between him and Louisville newspapers.

Excerpts from the letter, which was addressed to George O. Oxley, publicity director for the National Electric Light Association, and had been introduced into evidence last April, were read by Robert E. Healy, commission counsel.

Healy stressed the statement contained that Montgomery had personally kept "the editorial departments informed on all matters of importance to the industry at large, such as the Boulder Dam controversy, the Walsh resolution, etc."

"I was rather careless in the use of my language here," Montgomery testified.

Upon being questioned further, he said the assertion was untrue.

Healy produced a letter from Montgomery to the Louisville Courier Journal, of Oct. 2, 1928, in which the witness also had retracted a statement that he had personally handed matter on utility subjects to Louisville editors with the result that the papers had "continually run news stories and very splendid editorials favoring the interests of public utilities."

Montgomery explained that the letter in question had been written to Oxley for the purpose of convincing him that the method being followed concerning publicity work there was adequate and that no public utility information bureau was needed.

He said the publicity work had been done satisfactorily prior to that, and he sought to avoid the establishment of a committee because his company would have had to finance it to a relatively large extent.

One letter introduced, addressed to Dempster McMurphy, of the Middle West Utilities Company, Chicago, said publicity work at that time constituted a bi-monthly news service being sent to a mailing list of 1300, and that "the results obtained from the appearance of this bulletin, which goes to some 250 newspapers in Kentucky, are very gratifying."

Montgomery testified this bulletin was later discontinued.

SMITH SEES NO NEED FOR SESSION OF REGISTRATION

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 24 (INS)—A special session of the legislature to enact amendments to the election law because of the increased registration would be "wholly impracticable" in the opinion of Governor Smith. In a letter he sent today to John Holley Clark Jr., New York lawyer, the Governor said he was convinced the boards and officials of all municipalities "will take appropriate action to guarantee to every voter the fullest opportunity to exercise his franchise."

HOPE FOR CREW OF HUB SHIP

New York, Oct. 23 (AP)—Agents of the American tank steamer David C. Reid expressed hope today that its crew escaped in lifeboats when the ship foundered in a gale and that they found refuge on some vessel.

Hope is based on a radio message from the steamship City of Weatherford, which on October 19 found two lifeboats near the position given by the tanker 1 nis distress calls.

One of the boats bore the name David C. Reid. The ship is owned in Boston.

HAMILTON OSGOODS AT NEW HOME, SAYS BETTY ALDEN

Mr. and Mrs. Everett Morss, Jr., to Return to Boston Aboard Liner Cedric

WHERE ARE THE BRIDES WHO ONLY YESTERDAY donned something trig in "going-away" outfits and set sail on honeymoon seas? They are here, there, and everywhere, to be exact. Some are still half way across the world. Some are home again, involved in the intricate processes of first housekeeping days. As is that altogether charming young matron, Mrs. Hamilton Osgood, born Gray, and now chatelaine of a brand new establishment out on Memorial drive. The Osgoods have been home three weeks now, after a delightful honeymoon, spent partly in whirling all over Scotland by motor, and partly doing a round of country house visits in England.

OF COURSE, AS A BRIDE MRS. OSGOOD WAS CHARMING. Friends here were not eyewitnesses to the event, to be sure. But they could elaborate on a cable's meagreness and read into the picture royal patronage and the romantic elements of family estates and devoted relatives. Mr. Gray, British consul-general, invariably packs his family back home to England for their summers, so Mr. Osgood crossed the ocean to become a benedict and entered that felicitous state in midsummer at Mrs. Gray's home in Yorkshire when a bright-eyed bride wore a wedding veil loaned by royalty and spelling admiration and friendship from those in the most exalted places.

STILL HONEYMOONING ARE THE HAMILTON WARRENS, who linger in Lucerne, where something of Switzerland's sparkle and brilliance will bring young Mr. Warren a speedy return to health after a temporary indisposition. Stretching indefinitely into the future is the Warren lane de Miel, a pleasant prospect for the son of Mr. and Mrs. Fiske Warren and the daughter of the Randolph Tuckers, who can encounter friends in almost any social circle from Boston to the Antipodes. Even were the young people not in themselves of interest, they could shine in parental reflected lustre, and fairly scintillate in the aura emanating from second generation progenitors.

GRANDMERE TO THE BRIDEGROOM IS MRS. HAMILTON OSGOOD, professedly of Boston and Dublin, N. H., but preferedly of the wide, wide world. This remarkable octogenarian globe-trots with the fervor of a debutante and extracts from the passing show a zest quite unknown in the fanfcies of the blase bud surfeited with her 20 years. Travelers speak of encountering Mrs. Osgood along the earth's newest and most spectacular routes, and, of course, the sights and celebrities of established centers are an open book to her. In the grandpere and grandmere relationship to Mrs. Warren stand the Edward M. Houses, and as the entire civilized world well recalls, that gentleman was the trusted friend of a wartime President and intimately concerned in world's remaking, and an envoy extraordinary to councils of the mighty.

A JOYOUS, CAREFREE SWATHE ACROSS THE CONTINENT Mr. and Mrs. Everett Morss, Jr., are cutting. They have "read" at the Ritz and rubbed elbows with Piccadilly's crush. Now they are doing beautiful Devonshire by motor, and before they embark on the Cedric and come sailing into Boston, some time in November, they will have accomplished a honeymoon travelogue intimately concerned with every place worth mentioning. As Miss Anne Wentworth, Mrs. Morss ranked with the young set's liveliest, the typical post-debutante who could dance all night and bob up at "work" next morning bright and smiling.

AS MRS. MORSS SHE WILL HAVE A BEACON ST. ADDRESS, the new establishment having been selected and arranged at No. 250 in Boston's street of the conservatives. The Strafford Wentworths are her parents, and the "in-laws" include the Everett Morsses, senior, and the Gardiner Fiskes, definitely placed with the set that loves to own splendid equines, to show them in the ring and ride them to hounds.

SOMEWHERE "ABROAD" ARE THE LESLIE BUSWELLS, doing a round of country house visits in England and the English bride, remains in town for the avowed purpose of redecorating and refurnishing an apartment for the newlyweds, against their arrival some time about November 1. Mrs. Higginson some time since relinquished the cares and opulences of an enormous Beacon st. establishment for the more popular apartment at 101 Chestnut st. Now she relinquishes this to the younger Higginsons and abides temporarily at the Ritz-Carlton, way station between a Boston summer and California winter. Francis L. Higginson, Jr., and the small daughter, Miss Griselda Higginson, came in only yesterday from England and the nuptials above mentioned.

MR. AND MRS. BLAKE CABOT did the transatlantic crossing so indispensably the aftermath of smart alliances. Now they are back in town again after their summer of wandering, and established temporarily with Mrs. Fellen Cabot, mater to the bridegroom, at her Charles st. apartment. Born a Dewart, Mrs. Cabot, the younger, shown resplendent on a June Saturday overwhelmingly bridish, even for the hymeneal month. Her parents, the William H. Dewarts, have a place at the North Shore and a penchant for life abroad, some of the latter devoted to an Oxonian existence while some of the young people studied at that historic seat of the higher culture.

MRS. TAYLOR SCOTT HARDIN, the attractive former Nancy Hale, presides graciously and gracefully over a New York apartment. Mr. Hardin took his bride south for a honeymoon, short of duration but packed full of festivities tendered by devoted friends. And brought her back to metropolitan gaieties just as the winter's season gets into its stride. Mrs. Hardin is a Bostonian with the flair of smart dressing, and an interesting personality which

The triennial Protestant Episcopal convention in Washington is urgently requested to recognise faith cures. In such cures the patient helps himself by believing that someone else will help him. Faith can do many things. A man was bound to a chair, his feet put in hot water and told that his feet would be cut by a razor.

The back of a razor was drawn across the soles of his feet. Not a drop of blood was shed, but he died. What can kill, can cure.

Some doctors wisely believe that faith healing should be used to help nervous patients.

After Herbert Hoover's speech telling Governor Smith that his policies were Socialistic, Wall Street brokers bet $25,000 even that Hoover will carry New York against Smith.

The odds had been on Smith previously. Mr. Hoover, of course, relies not on Governor Smith's Socialism, but on his own constructive plans. But he knows human nature and the value of giving "something to chew on" to those that don't know much of anything.

Best Remedy for Obstinate Cough Made at Home

You'll never know how quickly a stubborn cough or chest cold can be conquered, until you try this famous recipe. It is used in millions of homes, because it gives more prompt, positive relief than anything else. It's no trouble at all to mix and costs but a trifle.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey to make a full pint. This saves two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough medicine, and gives you a purer, better remedy. It never spoils, and tastes good—children like it.

You can actually feel its penetrating, soothing action on the inflamed throat membranes. It also promptly loosens the germ-laden phlegm, and at the same time, it is absorbed into the blood, where it acts directly on the bronchial tubes. This three-fold action explains why it brings such quick relief even in severe bronchial coughs and "flu" coughs.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form, and known as one of the greatest healing agents for severe coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles.

Do not accept a substitute for Pinex. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

TIGER LOVE by EUSTACE HALE BALL

An Amazing Story of a Dancer

CHAPTER 14

MEREDITH seemed at a loss for words as Roala's great eyes questioned him. He fumbled with his tobacco pouch crammed the bowl of his brier with the fragrant brown crumbs, and then forgot to light it as he studied the distant contour of the hills.

The supreme moment, for which he had longed so avidly ever since the night of awakened love; his great chance to secure the happiness which only one woman in the world could now bestow upon him—these were at his fingertips, within the touch of his hand, the sound of his voice, the reasting of his eye.

And, yet, as man has done since the first romance in the Garden of Eden, he hesitated . . . waiting for the woman to lead the way!

"You wished to ask me . . . something?" and the scarlet lips curved mischievously, as Roala realized for the first time that maidens were not the only ones who could feel embarrassment.

"Two things I would ask," he parried. "And the most important one last."

Now his gray eyes were smiling, although his voice was deep in its serious tone.

"Think very long and hard," he told her. "Try to remember every word and act of your—your parents, Fairim Gad and Nigili. Go back through the years to your earliest recollections. And then after deep study here in the great bright light of the morrow when truth and memory should be the same and ought to be very easy—tell me if you have any reason to believe that they are not your parents!

Roala's eyes grew bigger, as the keen question cut into the very innermost secrets of her soul.

She clasped and unclasped her slender fingers, which grew icy with nervousness. Meredith had looked away from her, to puff at his new lighted pipe.

He had not wished to make her uneasy. That she had endured much since the dawning of the day before he knew, and any girl in the world, of any race or color, would naturally be shy and uncertain in this sudden whirlpool of tragedy and let-

HALT 'DYING' MAN'S WEDDING

OBJECTION MADE BY SISTER

The wedding plans of John W. Lufkin, 79, retired wealthy Whitman shoe manufacturer, living at Hotel Brunswick, and Mrs. Eva Walker, 59, his Brockton nurse, were frustrated today when Municipal Judge Murray revoked the five-day waiver he granted to them yesterday.

A sister of Lufkin charged he was dying and alleged the marriage was planned to get possession of his fortune before his death.

Lufkin, obsessed of a fortune, has been ill for several months and after the death of his wife a year ago the Brockton nurse was engaged to attend him. Through his illness, Mrs. Walker has been at his bedside day and night.

FAILS IN RADIO CALL TO 'WOMAN IN MARS'

London, Oct. 24 (AP)—Dr Mansfield Robinson has been telepathically informed from Xars, he says, that a message shot in the Martian direction early this morning was not received, but he blames lack of facilities on the part of the British postoffice for the failure.

The message was addressed to a woman on Mars, with whom Dr. Robinson claimed to have an acquaintance through a telepathic visit there. He hoped to receive a reply, and said that certain signals had come from the planet to him and Prof. Low, a scientific friend, at Chiswick.

Respecting the dearth of signals at the British official radio station, Dr. Robinson said:

"The wavelength of 18,700 meters used by the postoffice does not go through the heavy side layer of rarified air, and therefore the signals are reflected around the earth.

"I was unable to get higher wave length," he continued, "so as to increase the chance of getting through. I am satisfied there is no object in making further tests from this country on the same low wave length.

"I only hope some American millionaire will put up a few shillings and get a 30,000-meter wave length."

Nevertheless the Martians were trying to get a message through simultaneously. Dr. Robinson believed. The postoffice authorities notified him there was no response to his message, but Prof. Low who put up an apparatus for Dr. Robinson to listen in on heard certain "mysterious sounds."

"Prof. Low got a lot of things," said Robinson, "but could not recognize them as intelligent messages. They were extraordinary things, as if electrical disturbances were confusing them."

MARIE MAY ACT TO END PRINCE'S ROMANCE

London, Oct. 24 (INS)—Prince Nicholas of Rumania, youngest son of Queen Marie, who was recently reported to have eloped to Paris with Mme. Dumitrescu Tahon, a beautiful and wealthy Rumanian society woman, will soon marry a princess of one of the reigning houses of Europe, according to a dispatch from Bucharest today quoting the newspaper Cuvantul.

It is believed that Queen Marie is insisting that Nicholas marry in order to break up the love affair between him and Mme. Dumitrescu Tahon. The Queen had intervened in a similar way to break up the romance between former Crown Prince Carol, brother of Nicholas, and Mme Zizi Lambrino. At that time the Queen compelled Carol to marry Princess Helen of Greece.

Nich-las is 25 years old. He was reported to have eloped to Paris with Mme. Dumitrescu Tahon in September. Later the Rumanian legation in Paris and the chamberlain of the Rumanian court at Bucharest denied there had been any elopement. It was stated Nicholas had gone to Paris for medical treatment accompanied only by a military aide. He returned to Bucharest a fortnight ago. Queen Marie fluenza, gout and neuralgia rheumatism.

And when Betty pouts, her plate is shoved away, her porridge left untouched. Do what you may, tell her what stories you will, you cannot make her hungry for even her favorite food. The broth is nasty, the jam too sticky, the potato cold.

Deep in her heart every mother fears these curious, finicky moods that children have. And every mother knows what is the matter, too.

Betty is pouting again!

THE poisons of fatigue, of course, get bottled up in children's bodies just as they do in adults'. And in children's bodies also they mean bad, irritable tempers, dreary little heads, woebegone faces. Yet so many mothers are particularly unwilling to shock delicate little bodies by giving harsh, ordinary laxatives . . .

This is important; because it is chewed, its magic laxative principle is released slowly, the way science meant it to be released. It mingles thoroughly with the digestive fluids—does not disturb digestion. In this way it works with the body, not against it.

Stop at your druggist's for a box of this pleasant-tasting, modern, scientific laxative. When you give it to your child you won't have to go through any coaxing or threatening—or any worry about lingering after-effects. With it you can correct constipation—now!

Feen-a-mint is different!

In the first place, it's just like a bit of delicious gum. You don't wash it down hastily with water, you chew it! Children especially like its cool, minty flavor.

Green Worried Harvard's Line Captain French | Sunday Baseball Sentiment for It Tufts and Brown

By NICK FLATLEY

HARVARD LINE STRENGTH WORRIES BIG GREEN

THEY'RE worrying about Harvard, up in Hanover, where Dartmouth is preparing to send what it calls its greatest team along the gridiron trails. The Indians of the North are accounted for a great campaign. It may be a secret, but the big Green line is supposed to be the best in history, better than the famous outfit of a few years ago, which boasted Gus Diehl and had such outstanding flankers as Sage and Tully.

Nick Flatley

The boys at Hanover were set for a swoop through the ranks of football, but the reports of Harvard's grim fight against the Army have disturbed them a bit. That Army game showed that the Crimson has a real line—a tough, heavy aggregation that takes its punishment and likes it. Horween's forwards acted as if they enjoyed the pounding Saturday.

A team with a good line is likely to do anything. That's a football axiom. When the enemy isn't slicing through backs are sure to start off for far distant places and get there.

Harvard was handicapped by inexperience and luck against the Army. Harvard will profit by that test in the war with the Green three days hence. A team that will fight right down to the evening shadows, with the breaks and everything going wrong, has something.

Miles of criticism have been written about the Cadet game. The facts remain, though. Harvard, outsmarted and outplayed, not to mention outlucked, always was in there trying and fighting.

Captain French played enough football in that one afternoon to put his name in the lists of the Crimson great. Forced of circumstances made him look like the goat. He was on the receiving end of the poor passes. It had been mentioned that he was brittle, couldn't take a smacking.

No back ever was hit harder or oftener than the same captain last Saturday. But he never weakened. Four or five times he was on the way to the open spaces when the soggy going ruined him. Dartmouth will be favorite, but the Green has no soft parade in sight.

STREETS TODAY PROVE THAT AL SMITH MIGHT GIVE BABE RUTH A RUB AT PACKING THEM IN ANYWHERE.

The quarterback could do no wrong,
Nor get his methods panned,
If he but knew his football
Like the knocker in the stand.

POPULAR SENTIMENT FOR SUNDAY BASEBALL

INFORMATION and intimation coming from all parts of the state seem to indicate that popular opinion has turned strongly toward Sunday sport. The referendum on the ballot regarding this matter will be watched as closely as anything on the ticket after the top.

Not so many years ago, this sort of referendum would have been snowed under. But times have changed. People have come to know that outdoor life, exercise and recreation are good for the physical man, who needs all the possible good in this rapid age.

Sport lovers are making a great fight for this Sunday bill. But they must keep tremendous pressure bearing right down to the last minute. The referendum must get 30 per cent of the total vote to go over A mere majority will not win.

If the women voters who favor it—and most of them do—can be persuaded to vote and make their girl friends do likewise, the measure can be carried. Some of the supporters are urging citizens to vote for the referendum first shot out of the box, then turn back and elect the President and the rest. Not a bad idea.

Making the Boston teams play on the day of rest would have been good enough for them the past few years.

A TEAM THAT WON'T BE BEATEN CAN'T BE BEATEN, UNTIL IT MEETS A BETTER OUTFIT WITH THE SAME IDEA.

One more Saturday of grid disaster, and a lot of coaches will start scheming to land new jobs next year. Hell hath no fury like the disappointed alumnus.

SAMPSON SYSTEM HAS EXPERTS DIZZY

ONE of the most interesting games on the bright Saturday program will be the collision between Brown and Tufts. The Medford team has not been beaten for a couple of years. Playing with eleven in its own class—weight, candidates, etc.—the Tufts array has swept along to uninterrupted glory.

Coach Arthur Sampson is a unique mentor. He does not ride his players to death, nor work them into physical wrecks. He's likely to give the boys a vacation any afternoon, and take the gang to the movies. He has a peculiar psychology, and certinly it has been successful. He knows his football, too.

His team should be beaten by Brown, which has been in the first flights for several decades. But Arthur is a surprising young man, and this game may develop a few shocks for the groggy experts. If Tufts should win, Arthur will get at least thirteen offers of big coaching jobs.

He knows enough football to get along anywhere. But imagine the horror and wrath of the former hero, who returned to help the boys out just before the big game, if he found the team missing when he arrived to tell the young men what it was all about.

Sampson has a real system, though, and sooner or later some big college with a real squad will try it out.

Boucher and Keeling Want More Money

New York, Oct. 24 (INS)—Having persuaded John Rose Rosch, gone to Hollygault and Patsy Lathyan to sign contracts, Col. John S. Hammond, owner of the New York Rangers, today was planning a trip to Springfield, Mass., over the weekend to confer with two other Ranger hockey players, Frank Boucher and Butch Keeling. Boucher and Keeling are holding out for more money. A previous report that Boucher had agreed to terms proved to be erroneous.

CRIMSON HOPES TO WIN IN AIR

Coaches Have Surprising Belief That the Team Will Out-Pass Dartmouth

Harvard's football coaches are a hopeful lot, to say the least.

In the short space of three days they expect to whip a team which was an absolute failure in the forward passing line against the Army into a better pigskin-tossing aggregation than its Saturday rival, Dartmouth, long ranked as the greatest eleven in the country in this department of the game.

What leads the mentors to believe that they can beat the Green at its own game cannot be learned, but they announced before secret practice today that they expect the Crimson to out-pass the Indians on Saturday.

This announcement means, according to those most familiar with grid affairs at Cambridge, that Dave Guarnaccia will be retained as first-string half-back instead of being replaced by Tommy Gilligan, a shift that was believed sure to take place.

For Guarnaccia, despite his poor showing in the Army game, is far and away the best passer on the Crimson squad, and what little chance the Crimson might have of being able to out-pass Dartmouth on Saturday would disappear with the Wakefield lad on the bench.

No hint was given as to what will take place at secret practice this afternoon, but if the coaches are sincere in their determination to outpass Dartmouth, every minute available for practice for the remainder of the week must be devoted to aerial drill.

It would be one of football's greatest mistakes should Harvard unable to outpass an aerialless team like Dartmouth the week-end.

It isn't likely to happen, either.

Harvard may, however, improve its overhead attack enough to gain occasionally with it, which would be a lot.

Needham Girls Cop

Needham high girls' field hockey team defeated the Dedham high girls, 3 to 0, yesterday, at Needham, in the first game of the season for the home team.

ART FRENCH

BEN BATCHELDOR

CRIMSON STARS

Captain French, Gilligan and Batcheldor will carry a lot of Harvard's hopes in the Dartmouth game Saturday. The struggle will be close. Both teams are good. Harvard has improved wonderfully in the past few weeks. A win over Dartmouth will start it toward the top again.

Bruins to Practice in University Club Gymnasium

OPENING SESSION TOMORROW

All Players, Except Goheen, Present or Accounted For Today

The Bruins squad, with the exception of Frank Goheen of St. Paul, was all present or accounted for this morning when Manager Art Ross counted noses.

Eddie Shore is expected here to night. Capt. Fred Hitchman, Harry Oliver and Norman Gainer arrived early today.

Use of the University Club gymnasium has been obtained by the Bruins' management for the rest of the week, and starting tomorrow the players will have a daily session to strengthen their legs and bodies for the actual skating next week.

GYM WORK NECESSARY

The first week of a Bruins' hockey practice always is an arduous affair, but the conditioning work in the gymnasium is a necessity and it further helps to promote club spirit and allow old and new players to get acquainted.

The veterans pitched in nicely today and did their best to make the new players feel that they would like their season in Boston.

Hedvera Green, Eddie Rodden, Ralph Welland, Lloyd Klein, Eric Pettinger, Cecil Thompson and Dave Gordon, all reported in fine trim.

Gordon is a brother of Fred Gordon who was with the Bruins a year ago, and, though a rookie, he is up for a tryout.

Hockey critics like the looks of Eric Pettinger and Lloyd Klein. They are big fellows, Pettinger now a great pair of shoulders on him, will scale 175 pounds, and Klein, only 18, is at his playing weight of 184 pounds. He is still growing and he bids fair to become one of the biggest men, physically, playing hockey.

GREEN GLAD TO PLAY HERE

Red Green reported weighing 164 pounds. He is tickled to even be out to play, and the Bruins veterans look for him to play grand hockey here. Green is only 27 years old, though he has been playing professional National League hockey for six years. He was not happy in New York a year ago, and he hailed his transfer to Boston with great joy.

The full squad which will report for gymnasium work tonight is as follows: Fredericksen, Galbraith, Oliver, Clapper, Galzer, Green, Pettinger, Welland, Rodden, Hardiman, Lauder and Gordon, forwards; Shore, Capt. Hitchman and Klein, defense; Winkler and Thompson, goalers.

PENN FORMS DEFENSE FOR NAVAL ENCOUNTER

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 24—Under the glare of floodlights the Pennsylvania football team drilled against the freshman eleven in preparation for its contest with the Navy next Saturday.

John Ball of Wilmington, Del., was placed at end in the position held by Bill Sullivan of Boston, Ball started the season on one of the wings, but Sullivan showed more stuff and was promoted. Ball turned the tables today.

B. U. STAR MAY BE OUT FOR EAGLE GAME

Al Bass, shifty little halfback, may be lost to the Boston University eleven for its battle with Boston College Saturday.

Bass received a badly sprained ankle in the scrimmage between the varsity and freshmen. Trainer John Collins taped the ankle tightly and Bass was able to limp about, but he will not be able to put on a uniform for several days, possibly not before Saturday.

This injury comes to Bass at a most inopportune time. He had just about established himself as a regular right halfback, and his work in the last two games with Vermont and Bates has been spectacular.

Despite his size, Bass has proved tough, and was not replaced in either game. His ankle injury may be attributed to the wretched condition of the field, due to the heavy rainfall. He lost his footing on the slippery turf just as he was starting an end run.

When he tried to regain his feet, the ankle gave way under him and he had to be helped off the field.

The scrimmage between the varsity and freshmen was cut short by the downpour, but not before the varsity had a good workout.

Phil Hootstein got into action and had his first taste of scrimmage since the opening game of the season. His ball carrying ability apparently has not suffered from his long layoff, and he ran through the freshmen for several big gains.

Cy Perkins is another cripple who returned to action. He has been laid up since the opening game, but will be used against B. C.

JUMBOS ARE WORKING AERIALS

Tufts Confident It Will Win 13th Straight Victory at Expense of Iron Men

A hard scrimmage session is on the card this afternoon out at the Tufts Oval where the Jumbos are preparing for their game with the Brown Bear on next Saturday.

Some of the new plays will be tried out on the scrubs with especial emphasis being placed on the development of the passing attack.

The squad has concentrated on the aerial game, with the varsity on attack and defense. The short passes were completed to a large extent, but the longer tosses were all incomplete or intercepted.

PHILLIPS TO TOSS

Phillips and Ellis took turns heaving the passes for the varsity outfit, but as has happened in all the games to date Fish was the only one who showed any ability to catch them.

The struggle for two of the starting positions in the line against Brown is not decided yet. At center, Brehaut, because of his weight, seems to have the call over Tobey but the latter is still giving him a battle. This is one position where the replacement material is strong and about the only one not certain with the exception of the tackle berth, where Littleton still threatens to break into the starting lineup.

The lack of first class replacement material is one of the greatest factors that the Jumbos will have to contend with on Saturday. The Bruins will be able to throw in three good men to Tufts' one and may be able to wear the Tufts eleven down.

INJURIES MAY KILL CHANCES

If any of the star backs should be injured the Jumbos' chance of victory would be slim.

The scrimmage sessions will be as easy as possible in order that the team that faces Brown may be in good physical condition.

The entire student body of the Medford college will be in Providence Saturday in addition to many of the alumni, to see Tufts attempt to chalk up the 13th straight victory at the expense of the Rhode Island eleven.

N. Y. U. to Have Soccer Team If Council Backs It

New York, Oct. 24—There will be a soccer team at New York University this year—if the athletic council at University Heights will maintain and support it. The soccer squad disbanded a few years ago with the lack of a field as a pretext.

Rowland Collins, assistant dean of the School of Commerce, has declared himself in favor of a soccer team and asserts that the matter will be thoroughly discussed at the meeting of the athletic council to be held this week.

Should the team materialize, William Rocket will be head coach.

COLGATE PLANS TO STOP STRONG

Hamilton, Oct. 24—With the objective in view of stopping Ken Strong, N. Y. U. triple threat, Coach Abell drilled his Colgate team on defense. Defense of the Violet forward passes was also stressed.

Roy Vaughn, fullback, was out of the second team, while Ed Hiers took his place. Abell is also grooming Macaluso for the position so that it is not settled who will start at the fullback berth against N. Y. U.

Tom Doyle was again shifted in practice when he alternated from an end position to tackle. The rest of the lineup remained the same. The coaching staff plans to scrimmage the varsity against a freshman team coached with N. Y. U. plays and formations tomorrow.

PENNSYLVANIA READY FOR NAVY ELEVEN

Philadelphia, Oct. 24—Under the glare of floodlights, the Pennsylvania football team drilled against the freshman eleven in preparation for its contest with the Navy Saturday.

Ball was placed at end in place of Sullivan. Dick Gentle, who was injured three weeks ago, was in uniform today and will be ready to play against Chicago a week from Saturday. Ralph Monk, the big guard who has been suffering from a boil on his arm, was in uniform and ready for action.

Calls 'Em Out

Coach "Doc" Lewis of the Harvard wrestling team issued the first call for candidates for the wrestling squads. Men who wish to try out for the varsity or freshman squads in wrestling or who wish to take up wrestling for recreational exercise will report to Lewis this week.

Dempsey Prayed Before Battles

By DAMON RUNYON

"I NEVER went into a fight that I wasn't a little bit scart. . . . I was always very nervous. . . . I used to pray before a fight."

Thus, my friends, from the greatest of all pugilistic "killers," from that panther of the Sangre de Christo Hills of Colorado, William Harrison Dempsey, called Jack.

He sat in a drawing room with me the other night coming down from Boston. I was returning from the Army-Harvard football game. He was making a flying trip to New York to complete the details of withdrawing from the cast of "The Big Fight," and signing with the Warners for a squawkie or moving picture with conversational accompaniment.

His face, blue-black from a new shave, looked as drawn as if he was on the final week of a training siege. He wore a long-pointed collar, and his hat brim was pulled down all around, giving him a rakish aspect. His clothes fitted his burly body loosely, indicating that the erstwhile Manassa Man Mauler isn't carrying any extra heft. He fits his clothes like a banana pulp fits its skin when he is up above 200 pounds.

I DIDN'T ask him if he is going to fight again. I think he is. He thinks he isn't; I didn't want to waste time arguing with him.

The only suggestion of the veteran gladiator in his disposition to reminisce. To look backward. To recount with some fondness old days experiences. We spent the evening "cutting up old touches" as the boys say.

I suppose I have talked with the Manassa Mauler a thousand times. I was associated to some extent with his early career, and in his heyday, traveled with him, lived with him. But he said things the other night that I have never heard him say before, such as the remarks with which I open

I never had any idea that William Harrison Dempsey knew the feeling of fear. I knew he was very nervous before a fight, to be sure. Eager to get in there and get going. But it never occurred to me that this man of pugilistic murder had the human instinct of fear. Or that he PRAYED, as ordinary humans being pray on the eve of important venture. He said another thing, too.

"I never went into a fight with the thought of trying to knock a man out. I early found out that it's very difficult to plan a thing like that in advance. I would just go in there and fight the best I could, and I suddenly find the fellow stretched out on the floor, without knowing just how I got him there. But I never deliberately tried to knock out a man."

"YOU know who gave me my hardest fights?" he asked suddenly. A couple of other chaps were in the drawing room trying to talk football, but William Harrison Dempsey, oddly enough, seemed to want to talk about fights

"Gene Tunney," I answered promptly

A slight shadow passed over the blue-black countenance.

"With all due respect to Tunney," he replied, "he ought to have knocked me out in Philadelphia in two rounds, considering my condition. And he ought to have knocked me out in Chicago, as far as that's concerned.

"The fellow who gave me my toughest fight was old Carl Morris, the Sapulpa engineer," he continued. "I fought him three times. Morris wasn't a great fighter, but he had a way of slopping around in there, getting on top of me and hitting me all over with every kind of punch you can think of.

"I thought he shaded me in our first fight out in California, though I stopped him twice after that. But after my first fight with Carl I saw that if I was ever to be a real fighter I'd have to school myself to get in there close and hook away. The way it was before, I was a

Martha Lee on New Breakfast Dishes

WITHOUT doubt, many of you have families whose breakfast appetites have to be tempted with unusually good foods. You rack your brains and pore over cook books trying to think of things which will taste good and yet be quick to make. In this emergency, dishes made with milk are very good, and besides being quickly prepared, add their quota of valuable values.

Probably you have already joined the growing number of people who use evaporated milk in coffee, but there are also a number of made-up foods where its creamy richness adds a unique touch which can be obtained in no other way.

For instance, take waffles. Try this recipe and see if it doesn't win a chorus of praise. Mix and sift 1¾ c. flour, 2 tsps. baking powder, 1 tsp. salt and 1 tbsp. sugar. Dilute ½ c. evaporated milk with 7½ c. water and add to the flour mixture slowly, beating with an egg beater. Add 2 well beaten egg yolks and 2 tbsps melted butter.

Beat thoroughly, then fold in two stiffly beaten egg whites. Bake until a brown on a well greased waffle iron.

Pancakes, another breakfast standby, respond delectably to the use of evaporated milk. Mix 1 cup flour, 1 tbsp. sugar, ¼ tsp. salt and 4 tsps. baking powder. Add 2/3 cup evaporated milk diluted with 1/3 cup water, beat well and bake in a hot griddle, lightly greased.

Muffins and popovers are popular breads in the morning; a quick mixing and they can be baking while the rest of the breakfast is being prepared. For instance, bran muffins: Mix and sift 1¼ cups flour, 1 tsp salt, 2 tbsps. butter, and 2 tsps. baking powder; stir in 1½ cups bran.

Heat 1 egg until light, add 2/3 cup evaporated milk diluted with 1/3 cup water and add to first mixture. Add 4 tbsps. melted shortening. Bake in greased muffin tins in a moderately hot oven, about 400 degrees for 30 minutes.

Somewhat fancier muffins are achieved by blueberries. Mix and sift 2 cups flour, 3 tbsps. sugar, 4 tsps baking powder and ¾ tsp. salt. Add ¾ cup evaporated milk mixed with ¾ cup water; stir in 2 well beaten eggs, and 3 tbsps melted shortening. Add 1 cup drained canned blueberries and bake for 25 minutes in a hot oven, 425 degrees F.

Souffle, ham souffle, wouldn't anyone want to eat that? This, then, is how to make it: Mix ¾ cup of evaporated milk with ¾ cup water and scald in a double boiler. Pour the hot mix over 1¼ cups bread crumbs and soak until soft. Add 4 tbsps melted butter, 1 cup of chopped cooked ham and season to taste. Fold in 2 stiffly beaten egg whites. Butter individual baking dishes and fill 2/3 full of the souffle. Bake in a moderate oven for about 20 minutes or until firm.

A beverage, and the breakfast is complete, so here is the way to make cocoa: Mix 1 tbsp. cocoa and 1¼ tbsps. sugar in a pan. Add 1 1/3 cups boiling water. Bring to a boil and add 2/3 cup evaporated milk. Whip into it ¼ tsp. vanilla, a few grains of salt and serve.

Faithfully yours,

MARTHA LEE.

Three-Minute Trips

By TEMPLE MANNING

THE greatest, most productive diamond mines in the world are located in the Kimberley region, in British South Africa. Since 1871, when diamonds were discovered in the blue, clay like soil, the name Kimberley has become a synonym for those precious stones.

It is interesting to note the elaborate precautions taken to preclude the possibility of the natives stealing the stones. All native workers in the mines are segregated. Large fenced-in areas, wired on top, called compounds, house the miners. After they leave the mines they are literally herded into these compounds and locked in. They are not allowed to leave until morning, nor is anyone permitted to visit.

As the native leaves the mine he is thoroughly examined by overseers lest he might try to secrete one of the stones about his body. As he wears nothing but a loin cloth, this might seem to be a simple matter. But many of them have devised ingenious ways to hide the gems. The overseer peers into the natives' mouth, between his toes, under his armpits. Some of the larger mines are even equipped with fluoroscopes to determine if the enterprising native has swallowed a stone.

It is needless for me to add that these mines are probably the most elaborately equipped in the world. They are lighted throughout with electricity, and every device to facilitate the mining of the stones has been introduced.

A New Sister Act is announced for chapeau fashions. Fur and felt are combined in the new turbans and berets in an interesting manner. The smartest models show flat fur on one side of the crown, with felt on the other. A little perky bow of felt is tied high at the top.

For Young Figure

Bergdorf Goodman has designed an ideal dress for a youthful figure, in crisp white organdie. The circular volants flare in tiers from the waist, dropping low in the back in the accepted manner. The collar, which is also circular, sets out attractively from the shoulders, making a cape like circle in the back. On the hip is pinned a bouquet of field flowers in brilliant blue and scarlet.

Do You Know—

Shillings minted in South Africa and Australia are only worth 10 pence in England, as only English minted coins are current in that country, and colonial silver has to be shipped back to the country where it was made.

Life boats around English shores were launched on 242 occasions last year and saved, or helped to save, 23 vessels. Altogether crews of the National Lifeboat Institution have saved 41,168 lives since the foundation of the institution 106 years ago.

"Be a Good Sport" to Remain Young

"THE best way to stay young is to be a good sport, develop a sense of humo, and above all—be tolerant!" says Miss Marion Howard Brazier, one of the oldest living woman journalists. Besides being a veteran journalist, she is an authoress (publishing her own books), lecturer, constructive cinema critic, reporting to Will Hayes, member of 20 clubs and founder of nine.

Tomorrow she is to be in the receiving line at a reception being tendered to the different club presidents by the Parliamentary Club which she founded.

Miss Brazier is the president of the "Old Glory" club, and there never was a more ardent lover of the Stars and Stripes than she. Amidst the collection of autographed photos sent in by her admirers are framed fragments of historical flags and documents, accompanying letters from army officials. We sat in the foyer of the Copley-Plaza listening to the music and watching the fashion parade. "Poiret is said to have abdicated his throne because women in a body adopted such ugly clothes," he remarked. "What do you think of the men of to-day? Frocks as compared to the leg o'mutton sleeves, bustle and wasp waist line of your girlhood fashions?"

Nancy Brewster

STYLES HELPFUL

"I see something very moral in the style trend," my companion replied. "It has made men extremely callous about the feminine anatomy, which wasn't so when I was young."

The story of how she managed to get to journalistic work reads like a book; self-educated as she is, she is an example of what a determined person with plenty of pluck can do. She went out to California, on account of her health, in the year 1886 on the first Raymond Whitcomb vestibule train.

After the train pulled out of New York a general strike was called among railway employes. In order to get this train load of people across the country, Miss Brazier collected money among the passengers and hired the engineer and fireman day after day. Arriving in Santa Fe the train was held up on account of a hot box, and during the delay she visited the house of Lew Wallace, and in the ride that he used while writing Ben Hur, and wrote a letter back to an editor of a Boston newspaper. His reply was, "Great stuff, send more."

This was her inspiration, so she called on General Otis, who was at the time editor on a Los Angeles newspaper syndicate. She told him that her father had fought in the Civil War under him, and asked for a job. His answer was, "Good heavens, don't you know women are never employed as reporters." She retorted, "Since when have brains had sex?"

SIGNED NAME "JACK"

To make a long story short, she went to work, and for months no one knew but what her printed interviews were the work of a man—they were signed "Jack." She returned to the East and worked as a society editor for many years on Boston newspapers. Then she was sent abroad to interview important people; her witty stories about experiences here and abroad would fill a volume.

Several years ago she retired to become a famous lecturer; since then she has gone in for club work exclusively. Club atmosphere is her is as meat and drink to the rest of us.

Pride Is the Cause of Most Lovers' Tiffs

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

LOVERS' quarrels!

How foolish and futile they are!

Why is it that two who are in love take positive pleasure in saying cruel, cutting things to hurt each other.

"I have been going about with a young man for a year," Polly wrote me the other day. "He has told me that he loves me and we have talked about the future together."

Then Polly goes on to explain that her father is not in favor of her friend because of his foreign nationality. There are many happy marriages between Americans and foreign-born citizens. Doubtless, Polly's father might have been won over in time with the aid of patience and proof that the young man is worthy of Polly.

But Polly referred to the matter in what was perhaps a tactless manner in explaining to her friend. That's caused a quick flareup. One word led to another and in less time than it takes to write these lines a quarrel was on.

Polly's friend is "touchy" about his nationality. He announced loftily that hereafter he and she had best regard each other merely as friends —that some day—this, very cautiously he might call her up.

"But he hasn't called up yet," wails Polly. "I love him and I can't forget him. Won't you please tell me what to do?"

What are you to do, Polly, dear? What you said that young man really should do, if use the good common sense you seem born with. What! Let a silly quarrel tear down the structure of fine friendship and affection you and he have built up this last year?

Of course it may be that your father is right in his opposition to the young man as a friend or sweetheart for you. Your letter is a bit vague on that point, but the probability the only objection your father has to him? Is he in every other way a suitable friend, one who would be proud to introduce to your friends and relatives? Are you old enough to think seriously of love and wed? I do.

If your father's objections are decided and well grounded and you are a very young girl, let the friendship go for the present, Polly—that is best. Making friends is a serious matter, which affects a girl's entire future in many ways. A very young girl should be guided by the advice of her parents in such cases.

But on the other hand, if your father merely disapproves mildly your making friends of a foreign-born young man, and you know your friend is suitable for you and are of fine character and congenial tastes and viewpoints and if you are 19 or 20 or older, and you and he are genuinely fond of each other, then my first word of advice to you still holds: Use your common sense and refuse to lose a friend over a silly tiff.

Why do young people who love each other allow themselves to become so supersensitive that a slight, unintended hurt, leads to a tiff and both refuse to speak or recognize each other?

Why should not lovers use good "horse sense" like other folks and forget the incident? Instead, a young man and girl who really care for each other often behave toward each other like imbeciles.

A girl in such a case is at a disadvantage, for in making advances toward a reconciliation she may feel that she will seem to force herself on the attention of the young man. Still if she is in the wrong, it is only sensible and womanly for a girl to admit she was mistaken and is sorry and ask that the friend ship go on as before. Then she will at least have done her part. But a young man under such circumstances should be especially careful to prove he is a gentleman by taking the initiative as a gentleman should and generously opening the way to an adjustment.

Too often, an incident which otherwise would hardly notice is permitted by young lovers to ferment. The one of hurt soon wears off and is succeeded by false pride. Both are sorry in their hearts. But the actions of both belie their real feelings, and the course of both lives may be changed. A romance that should have ended happily is blighted. In such circumstances, neither should hesitate to make advances toward reconciliation and neither should hesitate to meet an advance —even the smallest.

And so, Polly, dear, I hope that you and your friend love each other and are suitable in character and tastes and that things that really count, you and he will "make up" and will agree to wait for a year or more while he proves to your father by his life, character and loyalty that he not only loves you but can care for you and make you happy as his sweetheart and wife.

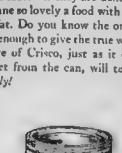
You taste your milk—
You test your eggs—



NOW—taste your shortening!

Crisco's sweet flavor will delight you!

STOLEN LOVE

Author of "The SECRET STUDIO"

Will Any Man Love a Girl Who Has a Past She Tries to Hide?

CHAPTER 23

"NOW you sit right there, and don't move until lunch is ready." Ruth pushed Bill into the one comfortable chair, and kissed the top of his head.

"See we're going to have a crab Newburg—and you don't even have to crack the crab for me! That's the kind of a hostess I am—all kinds of service, Will'um, dearie, in the top drawer of my chiffonier—in the back, under the nighties, you'll find a bottle—atta boy! It's good stuff, too, a friend of mine got it from a druggist, real prescription whiskey. There are two glasses there somewhere. Now aren't you glad you came?"

"Say, I didn't know you could cook!" he said, passing his plate back for a second helping of crab.

"There's lots of things you don't know about me," she said. "I don't know—but people usually get the wrong idea about me, Will'um. They think if a girl is good looking she's—well—not domestic. I am. I just love to cook, and make things comfy, or I would if I had the right fellow to do it for. I get so darn lonesome all alone. Don't you ever get lonesome, Will'um?"

"Oh, yes—sometimes."

"Well, now that you're back in town—"

"But I'm not going to be here long," he said quickly. "I'll have to be going back soon—"

"Bill—you aren't!"

"I have to, Ruthie."

She rose to take the plates away. "I'll miss you—"

"Come on down south, and marry Rollo, and you won't miss me," he said, avoiding her eyes.

A little spasm of pain passed over her bright face. "I told you I'd only marry for love or money," she said. "I mean it."

"Rollo will have plenty of money and he loves you."

"You spoilt all that."

"I—why Ruth—that's a crazy thing—"

"No it isn't a crazy thing to say, Will'um. It's the truth. I'm going to say it. I've been wanting to say it long enough. I haven't been able to Rollo, since I met you—"

Her soft arms were about his neck now, her lips on his cheek. "Will'um—do you hate me so much? Why, Will'um you seemed to like me pretty well. I have always rotten the fun we had together if you have. You seemed to like me pretty well, then—"

He jumped up, and shook himself with a rather unsuccessful laugh. "See here, Ruth—this is getting dangerous. Why, what would Rollo say to me horning in on his preserves this way, and you flattering me—"

"I'm not flattering you. Oh, be serious—be serious," she cried, her brown eyes wet and starry. "Bill Martin, you know I'm not fooling. I want to have more sense, but damn it—I haven't. Don't go away. Don't Will'um, darling. Stay here with Ruthie." Her arms were tight around his neck now, she was holding him close.

Her voice went on, cooingly. "You know you like me—you know you do, Will'um—I can tell. And you aren't horning in on Rollo's preserves, 'cause he's out of the running—kiss, me, honey! . . . No —not that way—miserable little peck, as if we'd been married ten years—or 10—Will'um."

"Ruth—have a heart! I'm Rollo's friend—"

"The devil with Rollo. Say you're going to stay—just a little while, Will'um—just another week—come on."

"I've got to go back—right away. I only came up—" he broke off in confusion—"I only came up—for a couple of days—didn't really expect to stay"

He was standing up now, looking around for his hat. She saw him, knew that he was going in a moment. "I know why you came up," she cried suddenly, her eyes blazing, the red mounting to her temples with the tide of her disappointment and anger.

"Oh—well—I've got to be on my way, Ruth. Thanks a lot for the—"

"Yes, thank me for the lunch and run away to safety. For fear you might accidentally fall for me! And that might bother your friend Rollo—never mind me—let me break my heart if I'm fool enough to break her—that's nothing, just as long as dear, darling, lovely, sweet Rollo is happy——"

She began to cry, chokingly. "Oh Bill—it's such a farce. Such a damn hopeless farce. I know that's the matter with you. It isn't Rollo—it's Joan—Joan Hastings. I know why you came up here—to see her. To make sure that she was really going to be married. Thought it might be a misprint in the papers—ha, ha—I know—I've been watching you whenever her name was said—I know—"

"Look here, Ruth—that's no way to talk, I—"

"No, it isn't—my anything but the truth! That's what you believe in, don't you? That's the motive with you, are you afraid? If you wanted her, why did you sit back and let Barstow grab her—"

'I Wouldn't Run After One Who Didn't Want Me'

"Joan—I—I wouldn't stand in her way—"

"No—just in my way. Just break my heart for Rollo. I know you, Bill. I wouldn't care if you didn't. I wouldn't run after someone who didn't want me—but I can tell you do. I know—I'm no fool. Oh love me, Bill—love me—you can't have Joan—"

Ruth's face was scarlet now, she was beyond reason, beyond control. She knew she was doing everything wrong, frightening him away, undoing all the good, but she couldn't stop now—it had to come out—

"Yes, you'll go on your whole life, worshipping at the shrine of that plaster saint—making a fool of yourself over her. I know. I know plenty more, too—plenty that would make you see red—if you aint. I have a good mind to tell you—it'll do you good—you have it coming—"

She mad feat to the coat, holding on with all her strength—"No, you don't—no, you don't, walk out till I'm sized on her shoulders.

"I didn't know you were such a cave man! Wonder you didn't give me a black eye!" She began to giggle helplessly. "I didn't know they made 'em like that any more—"

He went to the window and looked out, his hands in his pockets. "You shouldn't be about Joan, Ruth. You shouldn't have done it. She's so honest herself—so—so sporting. It will isn't right."

She opened and shut her hands nervously, waiting for him to go on, but he didn't, just stood there, looking out.

"You can't say I'm not a good sport, Will'um. I am. I wouldn't lie about another girl if it was to save me and the Prince of Wales' boy friend. Why, I've known about Joan and you for ages. Do you think I'd have let you go on with it? What chance would she have had with Barstow if I had or any of the rest of us?"

In Another Moment She Would Be Safe, Calling for Help

Quietly, carefully, hardly breathing . . . inch by inch . . . inch by inch . . .

Ruth was almost at the door now. In another moment she'd be safe in the hall, calling for help.

But he was suddenly alert.

"Stop—not until you tell me where Joan is—where Joan is—do you hear me?" The squeak of the door had roused him. His hands were on her shoulders again, holding her fast.

She began to whimper. "You're hurting me—let me go—I'll scream —I'll scream so loud—"

"Shut up, you little fool—keep quiet!" But he released his hold. "I'm not going to hurt you—just tell me about Joan—tell me—"

"You did hurt me—you did—"

"I know," his hands dropped heavily to his sides. "I must have been crazy. Forgive me—"

"You shouldn't have done it," she said unsteadily. Her eyes rested on his accusingly, amorously . . . he was so big, so supple and strong.

"Oh—well—I've got to be on my way, Ruth. Thanks a lot for the—"

Serviss on Animals

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

THE Dutch psychologist, Dr. F. Buytendijk, has taken up the challenge of the materialists in a book on the "Psychology of Animals," just translated into French. In considering the nature and meaning of animals' behavior he places himself at the opposite pole to that occupied by Jacques Loeb, the great protagonist of the doctrine of "tropism," which teaches in substance that animals are governed in their apparently voluntary actions only by the influence of external excitation, physical or chemical. Loeb assembled many curious instances of the attraction of light, heat, nutriment, moisture, etc., upon living creatures, which would lead to the conclusion that their movements are as involuntary as those of a stone falling to the earth by gravitational attraction.

Buytendijk goes to the contrary extreme, and finds a psychological element even in the movements of unicellular animals. He offers a definition which excludes the tropism theory in the following words: "That which defines an action animal or human is the aim toward which it tends, and not merely the antecedents into which it may be decomposed."

In his opinion, based upon long years of study of animal behavior in the Institute of Animal Psychology which he has established in Amsterdam, there is no precise boundary between man and the animal kingdom, but there is a field for all the animal world an "immaterial finality," inconsistent with mechanical causation, but indicating a controlling idea in nature.

"The psychology of animals shows," says he, "that living nature reposes upon ideas possessing a fitting, logical unity, outside of and above individuals, and in general consideration of life we should seek that unity in a world soul, or in the existence of a God."

To this a mechanistic critic sarcastically responds: "So we assist at the renaissance of the idea of God in a book of a scientific allure."

But is science, then, so inimical to any idea of any descent than into which Rosia had been tossed by the fates.

"Thank a long, long time, before answering me," he said. Had he but looked at the expression of the affrighted fawn in her soft eyes he would have leaped to a conclusion far different from that which her later words drew forth.

For the tears had come to her eyes. Deftly she wiped them away from the long curling lashes, lest he guess her secret sorrow and scheming when he had done with the tiger! "I am thinking very deeply," she said, in a choked tone.

And thus she spoke truth.

But its lie—innocent, well meant and self-sacrificing as it was that she followed with—was destined to change the whole course of both their lives.

Her instinct prompted Rosia to blurt out the truth, to save the sobering shelter of those strong arms and the valiant heart.

It seemed impossible to her that her relationship to the old man and woman could be anything else than that of daughter in every sense of the word. In her heart she could find a trace of belief that somewhere, in some manner which Pairim and Nigili had concealed from her, she had played with a small English boy, and that her growing remembrance of the white man's language resulted from that earlier association. The aged pair had evaded her questions, of late, and became so infuriated at her newly aroused interest that, fearing bodily punishment, she had given up all hope of receiving answers. Possibly it had been in some mission town such as she had seen in her travels, where small native girls were educated in Western ways and tongue by the wives of the good dominies.

But her memory, while awake, was so vague, so improbable, that one of all times she dared not stir up a hornet's nest of rancor and trouble for the old couple for whom she still felt the lasting affection of the years despite their recent cruelty.

As for the vaguest fancy that she might be of any other descent than native Hindu like her old companions, that was as far from her thoughts as the distant star whose roseate twinkling she had watched through the long wait until this dawning.

"I am sure they are my parents," Rosia finally told the engineer. "They were always so kind; many times even in the last few months poor old father has fought against the young men who would have snatched at my dancing goddess, or pressed themselves upon me. He is very brave, despite his years. And I—he has always been kind, and loving. I am sure he loves me dearly now and would see no harm come to me."

And that last was the tiny, "white fib," as an American girl would call it, which changed the path of destiny for the twain.

In her heart Rosia knew that some sudden, sickening change had swept over the soul of old Pairim as he heard his words on the mountain journey from the village after the slaying of the man-hunter. He had virtually threatened to discard his elderly wife and make her, the girl, his "woman"!

She shuddered at the thought of those crooked, hairy hands ever touching her now. Yet, they had been the same which had wound up the coils of thorns and rocks, in the earlier days of fond memory.

Ofttimes those greedy, grasping talons, as now they seemed to her, had petted her after a difficult dancing lesson—had brushed her tired limbs after a long day's journey from one wretch village to another, in that nomad life.

And she had seen the hands which now menaced her even in dreams prepare the meagre meals when tempests and torrid, overwhelming waves of heat had driven her and Nigili to the shelter of caves, of wide-spreading trees and waterlocked mud huts. How kind they had been!

Yet now the beast had crawled into old Pairim's eyes, during these recent days. She had trembled inwardly with every glance the old man had bestowed upon her!

She lied, bravely, forgetful of self, as she spoke again to the sober-faced white man now studying her so intently.

"Pairim Gad has ever been a true father to me, Sahib. He was most grateful for your gifts that night as I have often heard him tell my mother. And it was best for that I would have died, without the aid of the priest with medicine or the valor of the home where now we dwell. And I must say this much better than ever before, to be worthy of all his kindness since I was a child."

Lieut. Meredith pursed his lips, shook the dying embers from his pipe and stared moodily at the swirling waters of the pool below the little falls of the river.

"It was my first question" he told her. "I—I—I—I—I—I—I—I truly as you should . . . I had hoped that you might remember something of the earlier years which would give me a clue to finding out your origin. For I do not believe you to be a Hindu."

The maiden laughed, with genuine merriment.

"What would you have Sahib? A girl from far Manipola, of yellow face and slanting eyes? Or one of those strange maidens from the far northland, Siberia—wild of hair and tresses of thick cream yellow . . . thick lips and far red hands—"

She glanced down at her own slender fingers and the assembly curving ankles in the red and white binding cloth which was the custom of her people to wear when traveling the dusty roads.

He smiled and shook his head.

"I would have you just as you are, for you are fairer than the rose, your voice sweeter than that of any wild bird which tunes for us this morning, and your eyes as deep as the night through which I walked

When It's Harvest Time

DRAWN BY Dorothy Flack

IT'S harvest time—not only in the grain fields but in Love's field. Love's Harvest Time! All summer he has tenderly cared for the seeds of Love which he has implanted in the hearts of his subjects, and now—the richest harvest of all is to be reaped. The harvest of Is there anything in the world lovelier or more beautiful than Love? If there is I'd like to find it, and I am sure Dan Cupid would, too. Perhaps to many an aching heart the harvest times come as a season of sorrow. Because they know the mistakes they made in keeping Love away from them, in shutting their eyes and ears and hearts to Love's call. But who knows? It's never too late for love, so perhaps this Harvest Time will bring them the happiness they have longed for.

So if you hear Lovers call this season of Harvest Time, heed it! Don't run fruitlessly away. Love alone can give you the benefit of a crop that is older than Time itself—the crop of joy and happiness and fulfilled dreams that will last with you always.

Correct Manners

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I have a problem for you. I met a very nice man several weeks ago. Since then he has taken me out to dinner a number of times. The last time I saw him he asked me to call him at his office at a certain time, but I found it impossible to do so. I haven't heard from him since. Shall I write him a note of apology, and what should I say?

IMPATIENT.

IT would have been better, in the first place, if you had made arrangements for the young man to telephone to you rather than promising him that you would telephone him. However, since you were not able to keep your promise, you should write him a gracious letter of apology, explaining why you were not able to call him.

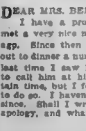
Never an Iron on My Hair

Wherever my natural arrangements happen to take me I would have a marcel, but I never do it myself as my own method—rubbing my hair with my Wave and Shine



Edna Wallace Hopper can also boast lovely hair

I always keep my hair clean by shampooing about once a week. I apply Wave and Shine with a comb. You can use a brush or just your fingers.

I dampen the hair with it—it will comb it in the direction I wish the waves, and forget it for about an hour. Some types of hair require more time, some less.

The result is a soft, lovely, undulating wave. Most people in my audiences think I have it marcelled. Many ask whether it is a natural wave. It is not.

You can have this same sheen no matter what method you use to wave your hair. Get a bottle at any toilet counter for 75 cents, the trial will convince you as it has thousands of others.

Winner!

The artist friend who advised lovely Dorothy Gray, 216 West 12th St., New York City, to enter two recent beauty contests, is probably saying, "I told you so." She won both of them and a movie engagement into the bargain! Too bad pictures can't show the loveliness of her skin and the gleaming beauty of her dark brown hair, points which the judges say, swayed their decisions.

"When I consider how people admire my hair now and how different it was not long ago," says Miss Gray, "I can't help telling about it. Dandruff had nearly ruined my hair. It had gotten stringy, dull, and was falling out. My scalp was terribly uncomfortable. Then a friend got me started on this method of caring for the hair which is all the rage among New York girls, now. I just put a little Danderine on my brush each time I use it. Since I have been doing this regularly, all dandruff has disappeared; my scalp has become perfectly comfortable and healthy; my hair has stopped falling out and has become soft, gleamy and pretty."

Danderine quickly removes that oily film from your hair, restores its natural color, gives it more lustre than brilliantine. It makes the hair easy to dress and keeps it in place. It stops dandruff. It looks oily and doesn't show. At all drug stores, 35c. A delicately fragranced toilet necessity for the well-groomed girl.

PASS OUT OF TURN

A PASS out of turn is void; but if the player at the left of the offender declare before attention is called to the offense, the pass becomes regular and no penalty attaches to the out of turn bid.

If attention is called to the offense before the player at the left of the offender declares, a pass out of turn is penalized as follows:

The proper player declares and the offender may not bid, double, or redouble then or later.

(a) If no bid has been made: The first bid has been overbid or doubled.

(b) If a bid has been made: The declaration passed out of turn is overbid, doubled or redoubled.

Example 1. South deals. East passes out of turn. South immediately declares, thereby conjoining his offense, and the action proceeds without penalty.

Example 2. South deals and bids one No Trump. West doubles; North redoubles; East passes out of turn and attention is called to the offense. North then passes. East must also pass and if South pass, the double of No Trump becomes the contract.

Example 3. South deals and passes. North passes out of turn. West, the proper bidder, bids one Spade, thereby, in effect, calling attention to the offense. North must pass. East bids two Hearts, thus forcing North's rights to declare in turn.

Example 4. South bids one Spade (a), double, North redouble, South, in full knowledge of the proper bidder's two Hearts, South now decides he has too little trump support to double that he passed out of turn has been overlooked. Had that occurred, North would have been obliged to pass also.

Example 5. South bids one No Trump. North passes out of turn. West passes in turn. North though he may hold a good take-out of his partner's No Trump bid must pass, and if East also pass, No Trump becomes the contract.

Tomorrow's article will be the first of a series on opening leads against a suit declaration.

We Whitehead will answer questions concerning bridge problems submitted by readers. Write to him care of this paper, inclosing self-addressed stamped envelope.

FAMOUS LOVERS

By COZETTE DOUGLASS

LOUISE DE KERCADILLE was the daughter of a noble family of Brittany, which, early in life, placed her in the household of Henriette, Duchess of Orleans, a sister of Charles II. It has been asserted by some biographers that she was deliberately thrown in the way of Louis XIV, with the hope that she become his mistress. However, Fate willed otherwise. When, in 1670, the Duchess went to England to pay a visit to her brother, Louise accompanied her, and the sudden death of the Duchess left her stranded. Rumors were circulated to the effect that the Duchess had been poisoned, but if Charles's sudden death took place much credence in the tales, as he passed Louise among the ladies-in-waiting to his own Queen.

Owing to the fact that when the King started angling for her out for his affections the French ambassador did all in his power to further the intrigue, many writers accuse her of being a spy in the employ of France. There seems to be nothing substantial on which to base this statement, but the fact recure frequently in various writings.

Louise, who possessed a strong will and was exceedingly clever, masked her true self in a languorous appearance and her childlike beauty did much to aid her in her ambitions.

It was only after she had a firm hold on the kingly affections that she finally yielded to his pleas.

That she did exert a strong influence on the King, particularly in matters which concerned affairs of state between England and France, is evidenced by the gifts and honors bestowed on her by the French envoy and also the King.

She was most cordially hated in England, not alone for her activities in the interest of France, but for the enormous pensions and money grabs which were made to her by the King. She was given the titles of Baroness Petersfield, Countess of Faversham and Duchess of Portsmouth. So strong was her hold on the King that she was able to maintain her position during a period of stress and danger to the latter.

Shortly after Charles' death Louise returned to France, living the remainder of her days in obscurity. King James Louise lost her enormous English pensions and was hampered by debt. She died at 43, leaving all her death dependent on a pension given her by Frederick, King of Sicily, and on an order to the regent. Orleans continued the pension and granted her protection against her creditors.

One writer has it that Louise "possessed no rules." It would seem but that is rather a wide margin to credit for one to hold the interest of a king for life. She must have had much to thank cunning and wit and all for love—all romance and intrigue on a part of the period of which was made more than ordinarily famous through ambition and soon lost all claim to love and romance in the maze of plots and intrigue.

Perhaps this picture will give you some idea of the trouble they take to make talking pictures in Hollywood. The snapshot shows an ordinary scenario room in one of the studios. The men at the desks are all struggling playwrights who have suddenly been hired to write dialogue. The man standing hints at the plot. A gong sounds. Then everybody writes.

THE MEDITATIONS OF A WIFE

By HELEN ROWLAND

SUCCESS in love, for most men, consists chiefly in keeping out of it.

Many a man discovers, too late, that what he considered his victory in winning a woman was only his Waterloo.

The bitterest moment in a woman's life is not that in which she discovers that the man she loves has been fooling her, but when she discovers that she can no longer go on fooling HERSELF about him.

Before marriage it is hard for a man to find words in which to tell a woman all he thinks of her; but, after marriage, he can often tell her in a couple of good, strong, unmistakable ones, that leave her in no doubt.

Any clever man may "get by" with a lot of petting and near-love-making, but it takes an artistic actor to imitate real romance, and make it click.

At 20 a woman always wants another lover to add to her string; at 30, she often wants another husband; but at 40, all she asks is just another FLING!

The ideal modern wife must be a clever juggler, who can manage a lot of domestic dumbbells, toss plates with one hand, catch the point of her husband's jokes with the other, and balance a social ladder on her chin.

No woman considers that she has been "properly groomed," these days, unless she can go into a beauty parlor looking like a hag and come out looking like a houri.

REAL FRIENDS WITH FATHER

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

THE father put down his evening paper and removed his glasses to regard the dirty, tear-streaked little face before him. Having looked forward to this half-hour of peace and relaxation before dinner time, it did not help matters to have his son ushered into his presence with the information that he had been fighting.

"Well, what have you to say for yourself, young man?" A fine start for a detailed account! If you've ever had someone approach you with a pencil and notebook in hand and an impersonal, inquiring look in his eye and the words "Haven't you something to say for publication?" you remember how every thought in your head seemed to dissolve. You know you had plenty to say, but somehow you got tongue-tied all at once and felt an awful dub. The small boy shifted from one foot to the other and couldn't discover just how to begin nor how to proceed after he had begun.

"My son is a street brawl!" The indignant accusation of the father's eyes opened the flood gates of information, and the boy's recital ended with—"—and so I socked him!"

The father wiped his glasses with unusual pains and in a frigid silence. Finally the boy could stand it no longer. "Wouldn't you of socked him, Dad?"

The father looked up instantly. "Little gentlemen don't go around 'socking people!'" he retied "Don't let me hear of your doing such a thing again." Tears made little white streaks through the grime on the small face and the boy dug his nails into his palms in an effort at self-control. Big baby to cry! But he couldn't help it. He felt so alone, as if he were the only boy on earth who was so damned as to take a whack at another boy. "Didn't you ever get in a fight, Dad, when you were little—or scuff your shoes—or break a window playin' ball—or—or anything?" he ended desperately.

"Go and get cleaned up for your dinner!" The boy left the room. He had tried to establish a common ground of understanding, but he guessed, after all, there wasn't any. He guessed Dad probably was a good boy and never got in trouble. Fathers were like that. Funny you could get into so many messes when Dad never had. He sort of wished Dad had busted a window one time so he could nestle down on his lap and they could talk things over like pals. Couldn't talk to mother that way. She was a girl and had played with dolls and things, but, gee, Dad would have understood if he'd only been a regular fellow instead of having been so good. Funny, dat of a cold wall between him and every one. He was bad. Father told him so, and father had never been bad. Sort of a lonesome feeling to be so bad and so alone. So passed for dinner slowly and solemnly.

And what a chance for friendship that father missed. We seem so afraid to climb down off our pedestals and mingle with our children as human beings. We seem scared that if we ever admit that we did wrong at some time or other that they will not respect us, or not obey us. Don't you know that they will not be children for long; that they will acquire mature logic and draw adult conclusions; that sooner or later they will know that we have feet of clay? Why not admit that we "busted" a window once, or got good and mad and "socked" some one? In our very admission we have a chance to add the account of what resulted, or that we have since been sorry. There is then a common ground of experience, a common bond of understanding and trust and affection.

A boy particularly, needs the friendship and understandins of his father, and I'll venture to say that this friendship cannot be based upon a "holier than thou attitude" on the part of the parent. How can you wonder why your son does not make a confidant of you when you meet his cutting of a class with the remark: "You didn't report for your geometry today. What am I sending you to school for?" Why not reply: "I used to cut English classes, Son. Almost got left on graduating with my class because of it, too. Now why don't you like to go to geometry class? Let's see what we can do about it?"

You can't have a growing boy's confidence unless you are truly friends and you can't be truly friends unless you come halfway with the confession stuff. You haven't always been perfect. Why not admit it? You won't lose your boy's respect. You'll gain his friendship and his secrets, his aspirations and his mental struggles. You cause he of more help to him unless you KNOW him, and you cannot ever really know him while you say to him: "I cannot understand how you could do such a thing. I never did."

AGE A HERITAGE

By LUCY LOWELL

SPRING is all gentle delicacy, pastel tints, youthfulness, promise. It is, perhaps, the season that we all love best.

And yet those features of Spring which charm us most would be without much appeal in any other season. For, removed from the background of the time of year in which they belong, they would be uncompelling sense way, without force of character.

What is true of the year is true also of life. The certain small traits, affectations, whimsicalities, mannerisms which are fascinating in a girl of eighteen may be bizarre or pathetic or ridiculous or downright tragic in an older woman.

Oddly enough, considering how many women discussed this fact, most of them are very well aware that it is a fact. The obvious explanation, therefore, is that each woman of middle age who imitates the dress and manner of the teens believes that in her particular case the rule does not apply; that because of some exceptional circumstance she can get away with it.

The fallacy in this argument is that there is no exceptional circumstance. A middle-aged woman looks middle-aged; a score of things, some of them tiny, but none the less positive, give her away.

It is sad that such a woman overlooks a point so important as the fact that middle-age has an attractiveness of its own, an attractiveness different from that of youth, just as the maturity of summer is different from the promise of spring, but fully as charming if properly acknowledged and borne with the grace and dignity which are its due.

'THE SATURDAY NIGHT KID,' IS CLARA'S NEXT

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Copyright, 1928, by Universal Service

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 24—Mal St. Clair, still hobbling on a cane to protect the broken leg, is waxing enthusiastic over "The Saturday Night Kid," Clara Bow's next picture. F. Hugh Herbert, who wrote this original with the little Bow girl in mind, has given it a Boweseque touch.

Small wonder Paramount goes out in the highways and byways to find a story that will do credit to Miss Bow. She is one of their best meal tickets. In case you wonder if Miss Bow is looking ahead for days and days long glamorous days, may interest you. Three-fifths of her salary is put in trust each week for her when she cannot touch it. Lucky girl to make enough money to save that proportion of her weekly stipend.

IF DENNIS KING does as well on the screen as he has on the musical comedy stage we may look to see Ronald Colman, Richard Barthelmess, Jack Gilbert, Nils Asther and all the good-looking leading men facing a formidable rival. King, who made a hit in "The Vagabond King" and has all the matinee girls raving over him in "The Three Musketeers," is coming to Hollywood.

King, as you probably know, has signed a contract with Universal to make a sound picture, but it won't be until after he closes in "The Three Musketeers." So goodness knows when that will be. Carl Laemmle, who is in New York with his daughter, Rosabelle, was instrumental in getting King's name on the contract. Laemmle knows a good bet when he sees one.

YOU always feel that Jacob Wasserman's novels are only for the intelligentsia, though he writes very reliable stuff, yet the name Wasserman conveys that idea. But is one reason why over at Famous Players-Lasky they are neglecting because "Colloquy," a short story by Wasserman, has turned out so well in scenario form.

Lothar Mendes, who will direct, is just back from a trip to Europe, where he, in company with Leo Birinsky, Russian author, and O. H. P. Garrett did a adaptation of the Wasserman tale. This is scheduled as George Bancroft's next, following "The Wolf of Wall Street," which you can believe all you hear it's going to one to make the folks write home about.

THEY can say what they want to about the talkies having no effect upon the portrayers of silent dramas. You will notice that all the new people now being signed are recruited from the stage. One of the latest people to commence to come to Hollywood is William Collier, Sr., incidentally our Buster Collier's dad.

Collier, Sr., who has Leon one of our most successful comedians on the stage, has resolutely declined to go back on the screen and has refused all these to even come here on a mild flirtation with the movies. But he has an offer now and I hear it whispered that he's coming to Hollywood to investigate it.

EDDIE CLINE maker of our best comedies will transfer himself and his trusty megaphone to Universal. He'll direct Reginald Denny in "Lucky in Love," Denny's next. Whether or not Bubbles Stoloff or Lee Lee, Ben Turpin's valet, will play opposite Denny, has not been decided. It takes a little time to make these bending lady matters. Isn't it nearly time that Reginald Denny's divorce decree became final?

HARRY LANGDON, who seems to have disappeared from the movies for the time being at least, is to make a vaudeville tour of the East, according to rumors. Langdon played in bad luck. He was a tremendous favorite when he was with Mack Sennett and now he seems to be out on his own, he did not do so well.

That happens to the best of our players. Sometimes they need someone who will say "no" to them on certain occasions and tell them what is funny and what is silly.

TWO of those on the sickle list in Hollywood at the moment are Roland Drew and Thelma Todd. Perhaps I shouldn't have said the sick list, although Roland is at the Good Samaritan Hospital for an operation on his nose, and Miss Todd has had her tonsils removed.

Roland isn't having his nose made over in case you think it's a case of plastic surgery. It's an operation to permit him to breathe better. He is trying to get rid of a habit he has so that when Dolores Del Rio returns from abroad he will be ready to play in "Evangeline," her next picture.

His role is Gabriel.

SNAPSHOTS of Hollywood collected at random: Joseph Schenck eating, lunching, taking part in a story conference and granting an interview all at once. Horrible, is he not? Clara Berangere De Mille in a nifty Parisian suit, conferring with John Considine and William Rakewell standing on the United Artists lot with a wig in his hand.

Mrs. Samuel Goldwyn lunching at the Montmartre with a decorative French frock. Harry Crocker, Harry D'Arrast and Hermann Mankewicz at the bachelors' table with their heads together. It looked like a good story. May Sunday finding a lost cat. Dr. Gordon, well known artist, entertaining his brother, Joseph London, newspaper writer. Bebe Daniels looking at a card trick with great interest. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

The boyhood life of William Cardinal O'Connell will appear on the Church Page of the Boston Evening American, Saturday, October 27.

NATIONAL POLICIES OF THE HEARST NEWSPAPERS

3. A separate Department of the Army, of the Navy and of the Air Forces, all united under a Secretary of National Defence.
4. Federal action to the limit of Federal Government powers to abolish illiteracy among the people of the United States, and the creation of a Secretary of Education.
5. Necessary measures to secure the election of Congress in November and its installation on the 1st January following, and the inauguration of a President on the 1st of January imdiately following his election in November.

Navy Second to None

That Is What We Need to Protect a First-Class Nation

Saturday is Navy Day. It might be called National Defense Day. Owing to our fortunate geographical location, no first-class power can attack us except across a wide expanse of water. Practically speaking, the navy is our defense.

If we have sufficient swarms of submarines and airplanes, no enemy navy will be able to get near enough to bombard our ports like New York and Boston and San Francisco, and cause us such damage as to force us to make peace. Likewise, the subs and the airplanes could prevent the landing on this continent of any military force large enough to worry us.

By all means build airplanes and submarines in numbers to make our coasts unassailable.

If our submarines and airplanes can keep an enemy fleet at a respectful distance from our shores, their submarines and airplanes will likewise keep our main fleet off. There is an excellent chance that the next naval war will be a war of attrition directed against commerce.

That is, the side that is strongest in roving cruisers and airplane carriers will keep its own commerce moving and chase its enemy's commerce off the seas. The job of cruisers in keeping our trade routes open in time of war is just as important as the job of submarines and airplanes.

Our cruisers will protect our commerce whether it is being carried under the American flag or under a neutral flag. It is unfortunate that we have not a larger American merchant marine, but, under adequate cruiser protection, our goods can move forward as usual except that, of course, enemy merchant ships will be withdrawn from our service.

But a strong American navy is not primarily for purposes of war. It is to assure us against aggression. It is to give us a voice of full equality in the councils of nations. As Admiral Benson wrote to President Wilson on the 7th of April, 1919:

"Even when force is not applied, the knowledge of its readiness is always an asset in negotiation. The smooth and leisurely phrases of diplomacy derive their pungency from a vision of the force in readiness that lies behind them. Governments are influenced less by words than by material facts. There is an unavoidable tendency of the strong to dominate, and of the weak to accept domination."

We want the fifteen cruisers built, which the House voted for at the last session, and we want them built at once. We want the airplane and submarine programs doubled in extent and speeded up in time. We want an American navy second to none, because, after all, we have a first-class country to defend.

Real Chivalry

James James James of Arkansas Wins Wider Fame Than That Due to His Name

James James James, of Arkansas, achieved local distinction long ago because of his name, but now he possesses a stronger claim to wider fame. James fell in love with a girl who repulsed him. In despair, he announced that he would kill her and then commit suicide. Life, he thought, would be nothing for him without her as his wife. Life for her, he reasoned, would be worthless with any other man. So he would kill her and himself.

But, on mature deliberation, he decided to kill himself first. He bought a pistol and fired a shot into his body. The wound was not fatal. Police lugged him to the hospital. The girl went about the even tenor of her way and all is well.

There is a dash of Southern chivalry in this incident. In Northern cities, the headlines "Kills Wife and Wounds Self," "Shoots Sweetheart and Tries Suicide" are common. Almost invariably in such crimes the man makes sure of the woman's death, then either balks at harming himself or inflicts a slight wound to save his face. James James James showed a better way. If all men impelled to kill began on themselves they would succeed seldom and the mortality records would be reduced substantially throughout this land.

Power Is Wealth

Ireland Has It

A message from Ireland announces great success for the Shannon power plan, harnessing the Shannon River.

Mr. McGilligan, Irish Minister of Commerce, predicts a gigantic impetus in Irish prosperity.

It is expected also that the North of Ireland will be more interested in joining with the South of Ireland for the sake of cheap power. The North is practical. And power is wealth, and vice versa.

Big Business Gobbles Art

More Money for Artists

Business gets bigger in all directions. Nothing can or SHOULD stop it.

It began with oil, steel, pork, etc., and now includes art.

One big merger absorbs twenty famous concert stars, including Hofmann and Mary Lewis. It is the biggest singing merger ever formed in the United States and will probably be on the Stock Exchange later. Then speculators will talk of vocal cords, and worry in bad weather.

He Diets!

The oldest pensioner of the New York Central lines is Thomas Jordan, who lives at Hartwell, Ohio, and celebrated his hundredth birthday recently.

His breakfast every morning consists of fruit, cereal, bacon and eggs with toast and coffee.

Of course, you can't expect a man of a hundred to eat a real hearty breakfast.

Coolidge to Make Flight

By FRANKLIN COLLIER

WE HAVE TO CHOOSE THIS OR THAT

By DR. FRANK CRANE

LA FONTAINE poetized the fable of the Ant and the Grasshopper. When the grasshopper applied to the ant for some of the stores that he had laid up for winter the ant asked: "What have you been doing all summer?" "I have been singing," said the grasshopper. "Then you can dance all winter," replied the ant.

This fable teaches us that we can't have everything, we can't play every instrument in the orchestra, if we have this we can't have that.

Carl Akeley, the famous explorer and big game hunter, who died in Africa while collecting specimens for the American Museum of Natural History, was buried on Mount Mikeno in Uganda.

It is related that while on another trip he killed his biggest gorilla on this mountain. Looking down at him he said: "I envy that chap his funeral pyre. I wish I could be buried here when I die."

Akeley had his choice, after a life of adventure that would have been the choice of some men and not of others. He decided in favor of thrills. His stay-at-home fellows decided in favor of comforts. Each gained something and lost something by his decision.

John Ruskin says somewhere: "Do you know that if you read this you can't read that?"

What is true of reading is true of everything else.

At the long series of crossroads, which is life, we have to make our choice. We can't go both ways.

We have to choose this or that.

We choose between exploring strange lands and enjoying the comforts of home, as well as between thousands of other things.

In every town there are men who have made opposite choices.

There is the rich man who has given his time to making money; and the man who has been a companion to his children and stayed a bookkeeper all his life.

There are those who spent their money as they went, had their good time, and in old age camped on the querulous and unwilling relatives; and those who scrimped and in old age had a feeling of self-respect, and the rheumatism that kept them from enjoying their wealth.

The essence of being a poor sport is complaining because others have the cake they saved, when we have eaten ours.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

JIM'S unraveling—going to pieces bit by bit like that old-fashioned underwear that came unknit if you pulled the first stitch.

Eighteen months ago Jim was as promising a youngster as you'd want to meet. Hard-working, honest, reliable, gentlemanly. Had a fine position as auto salesman—was right in line for a big promotion. Then he got in with that fast crowd and started drinking a little, and now he's on the skids.

No, he isn't a drunkard yet. Any one can see the evil of being an out-and-out drunkard. Jim's just unraveling. It's harder to see the evil of that. Most of us don't even know when we are unraveling. Until some day we wake up and find that our character has gone to pieces.

Jim doesn't know he's unravelling. He thinkss he's still the same fine chap that he was eighteen months ago. He can't understand why he hasn't been given that promotion. He spends a good deal of time blaming his employers and being sorry for himself, and telling his friends that a good, hard-working young fellow never is appreciated. And his friends agree with him and tell him to buck up and have another little drink. Which he does.

Jim's employers, however, know the other side of the story.

They know why Jim hasn't received that promotion. They know he's unravelling.

They know that in those last eighteen months Jim's ambition and good nature and reliability have dropped from him, bit by bit. He has become lazy and edgy and soft. He's always a little late at his work. He's always making excuses. He snaps people up or gets too confidential with them. He's a clock watcher. The firm is getting just about three good hours of work a day out of Jim—not always that. It won't be long before Jim will be looking for another job and wondering why he was fired and blaming everyone but himself.

Unraveling—

Lots of things can do that to a man besides drink.

And it can happen to women as well as men.

Too much comfort will do it.

Too much love will do it.

Success will do it.

And the worst of it is, we so seldom know it's happening.

Watch yourself—

MAYBE YOU'RE UNRAVELLING.

New York Day by Day

NEW YORK, Oct. 24—Early New York memories: Big John, the apple cheeked traffic cop at the 72d st. entrance of Central Park. . . . Visiting ball players loafing in front of the Hotel Ansonia. . . . The full dress ukase of the Cafe Martin. . . . Valeska Suratt's back. . . . Kid McCoy's place near the Metropolitan.

The ladies who shot the millionaire Stokes billed as "The Shooting Show Girls" at Hammerstein's. . . . The revolving dance floor at Murray's. . . . Rigo, the gipsy violinist. . . . The endless supply of wine from table spigots at Little Hungary. . . . The nickel movies with free gifts for children.

The little apartment on 39th st. where Earl Carroll wrote songs. . . . The cartoonists' table at Churchill's. . . . The race track pictures on the walls at Beefsteak Charlie's. . . . The pathetic daily drama at the Women's Night Court. . . . The waiter on Columbus Avenue who gave me a 30 cent check no matter how much I ordered. . . . And why now owns the restaurant. . . . The boarding houses on West 57th st.

Watching the making of Mary Miles Minter's first picture. . . . Diamond Jim Brady going to the theater with a Dolly Sister on each arm.

OVERHEARD in a hotel elevator: "He's so refined he often sits in a public park with all the places there are to go."

THE Film That Talks Like a Man is a boon to elocution schools. Scores of actors who see in the talking movie something new about which to worry are taking up enunciation and other phases of elocutionary art. Many actors laughed at the first movies, but that cured them. They are taking no chances on tittering at the "silver screen."

RAYMOND DITMARS was a plodding reporter—(and in round shouldered parenthesis I'd like to know who ever saw a reporter plod?) before he became curator of the Bronx Zoo. He is supposed to know more about snakes than any other authority in the world. Other reporters have acquired a knowledge of snakes, but never made it pay.

ONLY a dozen pawnshops in New York display the customary three gilded balls of the professetor. The new pawnshop has marble walls, onyx doors and tiled floors. The effect is dignity instead of the proverbial cross roads of poverty and despair. The interest rate today is never usurious and the very rich are often patrons in sudden emergencies. The neighborhood pawnshop proprietor is scarcely able to make a living on account of heavy competition. Uncle and his skull can has now become a polished gentleman with a braided coat and lapel gardenia.

I OFTEN wonder if there are others like myself who almost invariably, after lifting a hat with a gallant sweep to a lady and bestowing what seems to be a snappy forceful greeting, turn to crash headlong into some scowling pedestrian.

I AM one, too, continually returning the wave of some stranger only to discover the waving is for some one else. Sane thinking should be convincing enough no stranger would wave at me—unless, perhaps, my personality overwhelms them.

Let's All Be Joyful

Marriage Is Here to Stay, Asserts Dr. Joseph Collins, Erudite Author

Dr. Joseph Collins, erudite author and authority on nervous conditions, lifts a weight from the mind of the world with the announcement that marriage is here to stay. There is no reason, he assures us, why any normal man and woman should not love each other after marriage. Of course, many married people find it all a bore, but the application of a little common sense and right thinking will do much to remedy that condition. People should seek advice before marriage, he urges. They should not be too hasty nor yet should they wait too long.

Let us pause here for a sigh of relief. Lots of us feared that marriage was doomed, that the human race would be extinct and the universe slip into the hands of the lower animals altogether. Marriage, we thought, was in the experimental stage still, with only a few thousands of years by which to judge results. Humanity seemed to have progressed toward happiness conjugally, and the children of men seemed to be successful. Yet always the thought obtruded that perhaps we were all wrong, and we gave serious consideration to the idealistic, companionate, part-time and platonic improvements offered for marriage. They rarely worked well, of course, but perhaps the fault was not with the improvements, but with us.

Dr. Collins deserves universal gratitude. Marriage is here to stay. Now, if someone will assure us that the sun shines, that water it wet, flowers bloom, birds sing and the world moves, we will have little or nothing to worry about.
